ALTHOUGH the Sale of the two former Editions of this Register has been pretty extensive, yet the Expence of collecting the Materials, and of Printing the Work, was so considerable, that a third Edition would probably not have appeared if Profit had been the Object of the Editors.

After the Publication of the second Edition, in 1780, the making Corrections and Additions in an interleaved Copy of the Work, served occasionally to employ a leisure Moment. In the Course of two Years these Alterations were become so numerous, that the Editors began to wish to see a more correct Edition. They therefore made an Offer to Mr. Johnson, their present Publisher, of their Services in revising and superintending a new Edition, on Condition only that he should defray all the Expences of the Work. To this Proposal Mr. Johnson acceded, and at the same Time undertook to add an INDEX of Names. This had been a desideratum in the former Editions, which the Editors, from the apparent Laboriousness of the Undertaking, had been deterred from supplying. The Person, whom the Publisher engaged in this Task, has executed it with a Degree of Accuracy which cannot fail to please the Purchasers of the Work.

In the former Editions the Works of Medical Writers were added to their Names; these are omitted in the present, in order to lessen the Bulk and Price of the Volume.—A Catalogue of Books, which formed Part of the original Plan, is likewise now excluded, partly for the Reason just now given, and partly because an Account of all the New Publications in the different Branches of Physic, is to be found in the LONDON MEDICAL JOURNAL, a periodical Work set on Foot since the last Edition of this Register appeared, and which is now pretty generally in the Hands of Medical Readers.

In this, as in the Editions for 1779 and 1780, the Names of those Places, the Lists of which the Editors believe to be accurate, are printed in Italics.

For the Sake of Brevity, in the London Lists, this Mark † is prefixed to the Names of those Physicians who are Members of the College, and throughout the Work, (as in the former Editions) this § is employed to denote Members of the Corporation of Surgeons of London.

The Universities at which the different Physicians mentioned in the Work graduated, and likewise the Dates of their Diplomas, wherever these Circumstances could be ascertained, are added to their Names in a Parenthesis. In p. 12 and 113, the Title of Archbishop of Canterbury will be found occurring in such a Parenthesis, by which the Reader is to understand, that in those two Instances the Degree of M. D. has been conferred by that Prelate, a Part of whose Privileges it is to create a certain Number of Doctors (three if we mistake not) in each of the several Faculties of Divinity, Physic, and Civil Law.

As almost a Year has elapsed since the first Sheets of the Work were printed, many Changes have happened, that have rendered a considerable Number of Corrections necessary; many Communications have likewise been received while the Work has been in the Press. All these Alterations and Additions are given in the Appendix, which brings the Corrections down to the present Day. Care has been taken to incorporate in the Index all the Names that occur in the Appendix. —A separate Index is given of the Deaths.

The Royal College of Physicians.

THE abuses committed by ignorant and illiterate persons in the practice of physick, do not seem to have engaged the attention of the legislature till the reign of Henry VIII. when an act was passed, the preamble to which sets forth, that " Forasmuch as the science and cunning of physick and surgery (to the perfect knowledge whereof be requisite both great learning and ripe experience) is daily within this realm exercised by a great multitude of ignorant persons, of whom the greatest part have no manner of insight in the same, nor in any other kind of learning; so far forth, that common artificers, as smiths, weavers, and women, boldly and accustomably take upon them great cures, and things of great difficulty, in the which they partly use forcery and witchcraft, partly apply such medicines unto the disease as be very noxious, and nothing meet therefore, to the high displeasure of God, great injury to the Faculty, and the grievous hurt, damage, and destruction of many of the king's liege people, most especially of them that cannot discern the uncunning from the cunning." The act then goes on to enact that no person, shall practise physick or surgery within the city of London, or seven miles thereof, without being first examined and approved by the bishop of London, or the dean of St. Paul's, (who shall call to their assistance four doctors of physick; and for surgery, other expert persons in that faculty) upon pain of being fined five pounds for every month such persons shall practise without being thus admitted. By this act similar powers were given to the bishop of every diocese for the examination of persons practising in the country.

Seven years after this, that is in the 10th of Henry VIII. the physicians were incorporated into a college, with a power to elect a president, to have a common seal, to purchase lands, and to make statutes and ordinances for the government and correction of the college, and of all persons practising

practising physic within the city of London, and a circuit of seven miles round it. By this charter (which is said to be granted at the request of the following persons; John Chambre*, Thomas Linacre†, and Fernandus de Victoria, physicians to the king; Nicholas Halliwell, John Fraunces and Robert Yaxley, physicians, and Cardinal Wolsey) it is likewise enacted, that no person shall be permitted to practise in any county of England or Wales, without having first been examined by, and received letters testimonial from the president and three or more of the elects, unless he be a graduate of Oxford or Cambridge; but even a graduate of Oxford or Cambridge has no right to practise within seven miles of the city, until he has been admitted of the college. The letters testimonial are granted after a single examination, which is in Latin, and commonly on different subjects of anatomy, physiology, and the practice of physic; and then the name of the person to whom they are granted, and the county he means to practise in, are registered in the college books. The other privileges conferred by this charter have been confirmed and enlarged at different times since. In 1540, (32d of Henry VIII.) an act was passed to discharge the members of the college from serving parish offices, and to empower them to depute four of their body annually to inspect the shops of apothecaries. In 1553, (1st of Mary) power was given to the president to commit to prison offenders against that and former acts passed in favour of the college. And more lately still, viz. in 1723, (12th of George I.) an act was passed “for the better viewing, searching, and “examining of all drugs, medicines, waters, oils, and compositions “used, or to be used in medicine, in all places where the same shall be “exposed to sale, or kept for that purpose, within the city of London
 “and suburbs thereof, or within seven miles circuit of the said city.” This act, after recapitulating the former acts that had been passed, enacts that “the censors of the college, calling to their assistance the wardens
 “of the apothecaries, may, in the day-time, enter into any apothecary’s “shop, within seven miles of London, to examine the medicines, and “may destroy all drugs, &c. not meet to be used in medicine.” Persons resisting search are to forfeit ten pounds.

By an act passed in 1774 (14th Geo. III.) for the regulation of private mad-houses, the college are empowered to elect annually five fellows as commissioners for licensing houses for the reception of lunatics within seven miles of London, or in any part of the county of Middlesex. The election is to take place on the last day of September, or if that day falls upon a Sunday, then upon the first day of October. In case there shall at any time not be found a sufficient number of fellows qualified or willing to act as commissioners, the deficiency is to be made up from among the licentiates.—Within fourteen days after such election, the commissioners are to elect a proper person to be their secretary.—The commissioners, or any three of them, are directed to meet annually on the third Wednesday in October, or within ten days afterwards, in order to grant licences, which are to be stamped with a 5s. stamp. They are empowered to receive 10l. for every licence for the reception of ten patients, and for above that number 15l. No licence can authorize any person to keep * A portrait of this physician is in the picture of the delivery of the charter to the surgeons company.

† The plan of this institution is said to have been first projected by this celebrated physician, and, the Letters Patent for it obtained by his interest with Cardinal Wolsey.

more than one house; and any person, who without such a licence, keeps more than one insane patient in his house, is liable to forfeit 500*l*.—No licence is to be granted to any person without recognizance in 100*l*. with sureties.—Persons so licensed are within three days after the admission of a patient into their house (except in the case of paupers sent thither by parish officers) to give notice to the secretary, in writing, of the name of the patient, together with the names and places of abode of the person by whose orders he has been received, and of the physician, surgeon or apothecary, who have certified that he is insane.—The commissioners are empowered to inspect licensed houses as often as they shall think proper, and keepers refusing them admittance are to forfeit their licence*.

Linacre, to whom the medical profession is singularly indebted, was the first president of the college, and continued in that office till his death, which happened seven years afterwards, when he bequeathed to the college his house in Knight-rider-street, in which the meetings had been held during his life-time. From this house, however, the college afterwards removed to Amen-Corner, where the immortal Harvey erected a library and a public hall for them in the year 1652, and four years after this, brought the deeds of his estate, and presented them in person to the college. This estate, which consists of about forty-seven acres, is situated at Burmarsh in Kent, and is now called the Harvey-land. The particular purposes of this donation were the institution of an annual feast on the 18th of October, at which a Latin oration† should be spoken in commemoration of their benefactors; a gratuity for the orator; and a provision for the librarian. The celebrated founder had the satisfaction to be present at the first meeting, which took place only a few months before his death.

Two other members of the college, Dr. Richard Caldwell and Dr. Theodore Gulston, had several years before this testified their regard to the interests of their profession by founding annual lectures; and towards the close of the last century, the college was indebted to Dr. William Croone for another institution of the same nature. The lectures founded by Caldwell‡ are confined to anatomy and surgery. The Gulstonian|| lectures are on any medical subject the lecturer chooses to adopt. The Cronian discourses are to be on muscular motion; the founder, Dr. Croone, who was a Gresham professor and one of the first members of the Royal Society, having published a volume on that subject. Each of these institutions is for three lectures. The Gulstonian discourses are to be delivered in English; the others in Latin.

* By the same act similar powers are vested in the justices of the peace for the different counties of England and Wales, for licensing and inspecting private mad-houses situated beyond seven miles from London, or out of the county of Middlesex.—Nothing in this act extends to public hospitals.

† This oration is delivered by each fellow in his turn, according to seniority.—The last, in 1782, was by Dr. Milman.

‡ This physician who was president of the college in 1570, joined with the Lord Lumley in laying a perpetual rent charge of forty pounds per annum upon their estates for this purpose. It was in the course of these lectures that the immortal Harvey, who was appointed to read them in 1615, first publicly delivered his doctrines concerning the circulation.

|| Dr. Gulston, who died in 1632, bequeathed the sum of 200*l*. for this purpose. The lectures are to be read sometime between Michaelmas and Easter by one of the four youngest fellows of the college.

The college having been consumed by the fire of London, and the ground being only upon lease, a new building was erected near the north-west corner of Warwick-lane. This edifice, which eminently deserves to be considered among the ornaments of the city, is unlucky in its situation, which does not allow it to be seen to advantage. The entrance, which is grand, is under an octangular theatre, finishing in a dome. This was built by Sir Christopher Wren. The central building, in which are the library and other rooms of state and convenience, was designed by Inigo Jones. In this building the college have not been deficient in gratitude to the memory of their benefactors. Besides an inscription in honour of Dr. Harvey on the great stair-case, there is a picture and a bust* of that celebrated man in the principal apartment of the college. Here likewise are the busts of Sydenham and Mead, together with the portraits of several presidents of the college, and of many eminent physicians. Some of these were benefactors to the college; of this number was Dr. Baldwin Hamley, who, in 1708, bequeathed to it his mansion-house of Ashlins, in Essex, together with three hundred and fifty-seven acres of land; and the son of this physician was so far from being displeased at his father's munificence, that we find him some years afterwards, contributing towards repairing and ornamenting the college. The other principal portraits are those of Vesalius, Sir Theodore Mayerne, (who bequeathed his library to the college) Dr. Goodall, Dr. Radcliffe, Dr. Pellett, Dr. Tyson, Sir Hans Sloane, and Dr. Freind.

The members of the college are distinguished into three classes, of fellows, candidates, and licentiates. They all enjoy the same privileges in practice, but the two latter have no share in the management of the college. Physicians, who have graduated at Oxford, or Cambridge, or at Trinity-college, Dublin, after going through the usual examinations, are admitted into the class of candidates, and the year following are received fellows. Physicians who have graduated in any other university are admitted as licentiates. But a member who has been seven years a licentiate may become a candidate for a fellowship. Formerly, persons were admitted into the class of licentiates without having taken any degree in Physic; but by a late regulation of the college, no person can henceforward be examined for a town licence who is not a doctor of Physic, of at least twenty-six years of age, and who has not studied two whole years in some reputable university. Both fellows and licentiates, previous to their admission, undergo the same trials, which consist of three examinations in Latin, at three several monthly meetings, before the president and censors; and, if approved of by these, are usually admitted at the next ensuing quarterly meeting. Nothing can be more liberal and candid than these examinations.

There are four ordinary and fixed meetings (comitia majora et solennia) of the college in the course of the year. One of these is on the day after

* On the pedestal of the bust is the following inscription:

St. Michael, for the election of a president, and the other officers of the college. It seldom happens, however, that a new president is appointed every year. The learned and worthy physician, who is now at the head of the college, has been deservedly continued in the chair several years. The other officers of the college are four censors, whose business it is, in conjunction with the president, to examine the physicians who present themselves to the college to be admitted as candidates or licentiates: seven elects, out of which number is elected the president, and who are likewise empowered, in conjunction with the president, to examine and grant testimonials to physicians practising in the country; a treasurer, and a register. The second meeting is on the day after St. Thomas; the third on the day after Palm Sunday, and the fourth on the day after St. John Baptist. No business can be transacted at either of these meetings, unless the president and twelve fellows are present. Besides these there are monthly, or lesser meetings, (comitia minora) which are composed of the president and censors, and are chiefly intended for the examination of physicians, who present themselves to be admitted of the college; or of the president and three or more elects, for the granting of testimonials to physicians practising in the country.

The college, as a body, have published a complete and elegant edition of Dr. Harvey's works; together with three volumes of Medical Transactions. The last edition of their Pharmacopœia was published in 1745.

- 1756 WILLIAM HUNTER *, M. D. (Glasgow) F. R. S. and S. A. Fellow of the Royal Academy of Sciences, and of the Royal Medical Society

* Dr. Hunter, with a zeal and success, hitherto, perhaps, unparalleled in a private station, has at an immense expence, and with no less labour and taste, formed a Museum which does honour to this country. The specimens of human and comparative anatomy, and the preparations of diseases it contains, though the result of fifty years application to those subjects, form but a small part of this admirable collection. In the article of scarce and valuable manuscripts and printed books, it vies with the most distinguished royal libraries; and of its richness in ancient medals, the reader may be enabled to form an idea from a description of part of the collection in this way, published by Mr. Combe. Dr. Hunter has lately added to his Museum Dr. Fothergill's collection of shells.

The CORPORATION of SURGEONS.

WE had occasion, in our account of the College of Physicians, to speak of the act of parliament which first laid a restraint on the practice of physic and surgery in this kingdom. Soon after this, viz. in the 32d year of Henry VIII. the Surgeons were incorporated with the Barbers, under the united title of Barbers and Surgeons. There is a painting* extant in Barber's Hall, done by the famous Holbein, the subject of which is K. Henry VIII. giving the Surgeons their charter.

From the complaints made by Thomas Gale, a surgical writer of those days, it would seem as if the profession was not much benefited by this incorporation. "I have, myself, says he, (in a volume of his works dated in 1566,) in the time of King Henry VIII. holpe to furnish out of London in one year, which served by sea and land, threescore and twelve surgeons, which were good workmen, and well able to serve, and all Englishmen. At this present day there are not thirty-four of all the whole company of Englishmen, and yet the most part of them be in noblemen's service, so that, if we should have need, I do not know where to find twelve sufficient men. What do I say? sufficient men: nay, I would there were ten amongst all the company, worthy to be called surgeons."

In the 5th of Charles I. the Surgeons were by letters patent authorised to elect ten of their members to be examiners; and it was ordered that no person should practise surgery within the liberties of London and Westminster, or within seven miles thereof, without having been previously approved by two or more of these examiners. This sanction was a sufficient authority for practising surgery in any part of England. The Surgeons continued thus incorporated with the Barbers, till the year 1745, and having the same common hall, which was built by Inigo Jones. In this hall there was a spacious theatre for anatomical lectures. At that period the Surgeons applied to parliament for a separation, which they set forth would greatly contribute to the improvement of surgery. An act was accordingly passed, making them distinct and separate companies, and the Surgeons were incorporated anew by the name of the Masters, Governors, and Commonalty of the Art and Science of Surgeons of London.

By this act they were confirmed in the possession of all their former privileges, and empowered to elect a master, two wardens, a court of assistants, consisting of twenty-one persons, ten of whom are examiners: but the fine hall in Monkwell-street, and the estates of the united company were given to the Barbers, excepting the sum of five hundred and ten pounds, and a rent-charge of sixteen pounds, which had been given to the united company, the former by Edward Arris, for annual lectures on the muscles, and the latter by John Gale, for one anatomical lecture. Both these were assigned over to the Surgeons. There were other clauses in this act to enable the new company to make by-laws, and to elect a master and wardens annually, on the first Thursday in July. They were likewise empowered to examine every candidate appointed to serve as a surgeon or surgeon's mate, either in the army or navy. The first master, wardens, examiners, and thirteen of the court of assistants were named in the act.

* An engraving from this picture was published in 1736, at the expence of the company. The names of the persons whose portraits are introduced in the picture are given at the bottom of the print, and are as follow; J. Allop, W. Butts, J. Chambre, T. Vycary, J. Aylef, N. Symfon, E. Harman, J. Monforde, J. Pen, N. Alcocke, R. Fereis, W. Tilly, X. Samon. The names of four of these only, viz. Butts, Chambre, Vycary and Fereis, have been handed down to us in any other way. The first of these, W. Butts, who was physician to Henry VIII. and knighted by that prince, is introduced by Shakespeare as one of the Dramatis Personæ in his historical play on that monarch's reign.—John Chambre was spoken of in our account of the college as one of the petitioners for the charter.—Thomas Vycary, serjeant surgeon to four successive sovereigns, viz. Henry VIII. Edward VI. Mary and Elizabeth, was likewise surgeon to St. Bartholomew's Hospital, and author of an anatomical work, which is worthy of notice only from its being the first that was published in the English language.—Richard Fereis was afterwards serjeant surgeon to Queen Elizabeth; it was under this person that Thomas Gale (quoted above) received his education.

Soon after this the company erected a hall in the Old Bailey, in which there is a handsome theatre for anatomical lectures, and other spacious apartments. The court of examiners meet on the first and third Thursdays of every month for the purpose of admitting members; or for examining surgeons or surgeons' mates, for the army and navy. The examinations are in English, and the members who mean to practise in the country pay only half the fees of admission, but sign a bond for the payment of the remainder in case they come to reside and practise within the jurisdiction of the company.

The

The SOCIETY of APOTHECARIES.

THIS Company consists of a Master, two Wardens, twenty-one Assistants, a Livery of an hundred and twenty-six Members, and an unlimited Yeomanry. At the time of their incorporation, in 1617, there were only an hundred and four Apothecaries shops within the city and suburbs. In the great room of their hall, which is in Black-friars, are Portraits of K. James I. K. Charles I. K. William and Queen Mary; and likewise of the late Sir Benjamin Rawlings, and some other Masters of the Company. In the same apartment is a bust of Dr. Gideon Delaun, who was Apothecary to K. James I. and a considerable benefactor to the Company.

In this hall are two laboratories, one for chemical, and the other for Galenical preparations. The fund for each of these departments constitutes a separate stock, which is divided into a certain number of shares, the Proprietors of which must be Members of the Company. No person is allowed to have more than one share in each fund. The fund for the chemical department is called the Laboratory Stock, and that for the Galenical, the Navy Stock, the medicine chests for the Navy Surgeons being supplied from the Galenical side of the hall. The Proprietors of the Navy Stock, likewise furnish the medicine chests for the Army and East India Company. A committee of Managers, and a certain number of Auditors to examine the accounts, are chosen annually by ballot for each department.

The Company have a botanic garden at Chelsea, which was bequeathed to them by the late Sir Hans Sloane, Bart. on condition of their delivering annually to the Royal Society fifty specimens of plants, the growth of this garden, until the number should amount to two thousand. A Botanic Lecture is occasionally given here by the Company's Demonstrator.

The Correspondent to whom we are indebted for some of the preceding particulars, has likewise favoured us with an account of the Company's herbarizings. These meetings are distinguished, it seems, into private and general herbarizings. The first of these are intended to promote a taste for Botany among the young gentlemen who are apprentices to the Company, and are held on the second Tuesday of April, May, June, August, and September, at Putney, Hackney, Turnham Green, Tottenham, or some other village in the neighbourhood of London. On these occasions the Company's Demonstrator and the young Persons who mean to be of the party, breakfast together at some place near town, and from thence ramble over the fields till dinner time, in search of plants. When they have reached the place appointed for the dinner, the collection is displayed upon a table, and the Demonstrator, in the presence of the Master and the rest of the Company, calls upon his pupils to name the plants. At the end of the season the young gentleman who has excelled the rest of his companions in these trials of skill, receives a premium from the hands of the Master or Senior Warden, as the reward of his diligence and attention. This premium consists of some book on the subject of Botany.

The

The expence of the first and last of these private herbarizing feasts is defrayed by the Company out of their own fund. Each of the four other meetings is at the cost of some individual Member, who is called upon in his turn for this purpose, and who is obliged to pay a certain fine in case he refuses to lead, as it is called, or in other words to defray the expence of the feast.

The General Herbarizing takes place only once a year, in the month of July. On this occasion the Demonstrator and some of the other Members who are of the Court of Assistants, make a botanic excursion to some distance, generally thirty or forty miles from London. They bring back with them the scarce plants they have collected in their tour, after which the company dine together.

Assistant Surgeons, § Mr. Edmund Pitts, § Mr. John Earle, Mr. C. Blicke.
Apothecary, Mr. William Robinson.

ST. THOMAS'S HOSPITAL, in Southwark, founded by Edw. VI. in 1533. It is an irregular building, consisting of three square courts, built at different times, and contains nineteen wards, besides a chapel, a large hall for the Governors, and apartments for the Treasurer, Clerk, Steward, Apothecary, Matron, and other officers. The wards are well ventilated, and furnished with iron beds for the accommodation of upwards of 460 patients. There are two theatres, one for surgical operations, and the other for anatomical lectures.

BETHLEM HOSPITAL for Lunatics, in Moorfields, founded by Edw. VI. in 1533. The present building was erected in 1676. It contains about two hundred and fifty patients, an hundred of whom are incurables. Patients who have not been insane more than a twelvemonth are admitted, and allowed to continue here for the space of one year, and are then discharged, to be re-admitted in their turn as incurables. Patients who have been mad a longer time, or who have been discharged uncured from any other lunatic hospital, are admitted in the month of April, and allowed to remain here six months. The patients friends pay for their bedding. A committee of the Governors meet every Saturday for the Admission of patients.

Physician, † John Monroe *, M. D.
Surgeon, & Mr. R. Crowther. Apothecary, Mr. John Gozna.

GUY'S HOSPITAL, in Southwark, founded in 1721, by Thomas Guy, book-seller of London; it contains about four hundred and thirty beds, besides a ward for lunatics. A spacious laboratory, and an excellent set of baths have lately been erected here at a very considerable expence.

ST. GEORGE'S HOSPITAL was opened for the reception of patients in 1734, and contains about two hundred and seventy beds. The expences of the charity are defrayed by subscriptions, and those Governors, who are apothecaries, attend as visitors, to see that the House Apothecary does his duty.

* BROOK-HOUSE, at Clapton, and WEILS-CLOSE-HOUSE, Clerkenwell, (both licensed for the reception of lunatics) are under the direction of this physician.

Physicians,

if they remain so long uncured. They are then discharged, to be re-admitted in their turn among the incurable patients, for while the other thirty beds are set apart. A committee of the Governors meet every Friday at eleven o'clock, for the purpose of admitting patients. The patients are taken in without any expence, and according to the order of time in which the petitions of their friends have been delivered to the secretary. A new building, which is to be large enough to accommodate a greater number of patients than the present, is erecting for this charity, in Old-fleet-road, under the direction of Mr. Dance.

BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION for delivering poor Married Women at their own habitations, instituted 1779.

Physician, John Cooper, M. D.

THE HUMANE SOCIETY. The first establishment for the recovery of drowned persons was set on foot at Amsterdam, in 1767. The views adopted by this benevolent society were to inform the common people of the measures that may be most effectually employed in these cases; to caution them against practices which have hitherto been frequently employed, but which experience has now shewn to be pernicious; to infligate them, by proper rewards, to the exertion of every endeavour for the recovery of life apparently lost; and to defray any expenses that might be incurred in such humane attempts. In 1774, a similar institution took place in London, under the name of the HUMANE SOCIETY. Since that time subscriptions have been raised at Liverpool, Chester, Colchester, and other places, for co-operating with the London Society.

The society give a premium of four guineas whenever life has been restored; and one of two guineas for every unsuccessful attempt, provided the mode of treatment prescribed by the society has been persevered in two hours. A great number of respectable practitioners in London, and other places, have engaged to give their assistance, gratis, towards promoting the views of this institution. The following is the plan of treatment recommended by the society in their last publication.

PLAN.—I. The unfortunate person is to be conveyed carefully to the nearest public or other house open for its reception, in such a manner as to prevent the extinction of any small remains of life that may exist: For this purpose the head is to be raised a little, as in bed, and the body should be carried in a natural and easy posture, as in the same situation.

II. The object is to be immediately stripped, and laid on a warm bed, and the skin well dried with heated flannels; or if the body was naked at the time of the accident, it is then to be surrounded as expeditiously as possible with a hot blanket, and thoroughly dried with coarse cloths or flannels.

III. When the air is very cold, or moist, the various methods of treatment are to be made use of near a large fire, or in a heated apartment. On the other hand, if the weather is warm, or sultry, (as in the summer season) the windows and door of the room should be opened; and in every other possible way a cool refreshing air obtained; as it is of the greatest importance in bringing forward the latent spark of life, or in restoring natural breathing.

IV. No persons are to be admitted, but those who are actually employed in exerting their utmost endeavours for the recovery of the unfortunate object; six people are therefore the greatest number that can ever prove useful on such occasions; and those who are by-standers for the sake of curiosity should be requested to withdraw, as their presence may retard, or totally prevent the operation.

V. The

V. The skin is to be gently rubbed with common salt, and a warming-pan heated (the body being surrounded with flannel) may lightly be moved up and down the back for a considerable time. Square bottles, filled with hot water, &c. or heated tiles, covered with flannel, may be efficaciously applied to the soles of the feet, palms of the hands, and other parts of the body.

VI. When the methods recommended have been made use of for an hour or more unsuccessfully, and any bake-house, brew-house, or warm bath is in the neighbourhood, or can be readily obtained, the body should be carefully conveyed to such an apartment, and remain surrounded with either of the warm substances for three or four hours, in order to afford every possible aid for the return of life.—If a child has been drowned, its body should be wiped perfectly dry, and immediately placed in bed between two people of good constitutions; the salutary effects of the natural vital warmth have been clearly proved in a variety of successful cases.

VII. The body is to be rubbed with flannels, sprinkled with spirits, as rum or geneva, and fomentations of hot brandy are to be applied to the breast, &c. and often renewed. The nostrils may be every now and then tickled with a feather, and snuff, hartshorn, or eau de luce, should be occasionally made use of, to excite sneezing, if possible. While the various means of recovery are made use of by the assistants, the body is to be well shaken every ten minutes, in order to render the process more certainly successful; and the bodies of children in particular are to be much agitated, by taking hold of their arms and legs frequently, and for a continuance of time. In a variety of instances agitation, in conjunction with the methods laid down, has forwarded the recovery of boys who had been drowned, and continued for a considerable time apparently dead.

VIII. The smoke of tobacco thrown up the fundament should be ranked amongst the earliest applications; if a fumigator should not be at hand, the common pipe will answer the purpose of applying this vapour to the bowels. So easy and important an operation should be repeatedly performed, as the good effects of tobacco-smoke have been proved in many cases.

IX. One of the assistants is to blow with considerable force through a cloth or handkerchief applied to the mouth of the object, in order to introduce air into the lungs; the nostrils at the same time should be closed with one hand, and the chest gently pressed with the other, so as to expel noxious vapours; and in the process natural breathing is to be imitated as much as possible.

X. If there be any signs of returning life, such as sighing, gasping, convulsive motions, pulsation, or a natural warmth, a spoonful of any warm liquid may be administered: and if it proves that the power of swallowing is returned, then a cordial of warm brandy or wine may be given in small quantities with great advantage.

* * Bleeding is never to be employed in such cases, unless by the direction of one of the medical assistants, or some other respectable gentleman of the faculty, who has paid attention to such unfortunate accidents.

The methods which have been so fully recommended, are to be made use of with vigour for two hours, or upwards, although no favourable circumstances should arise; for it is a vulgar and dangerous opinion to suppose that persons are irrecoverable, because life does not soon make its appearance; it is an opinion that has been productive of an immense number of the seemingly dead being committed to the grave, who might have been RESTORED TO LIFE by resolution and perseverance in the plans of treatment now recommended.

†† The Society think it proper to observe, that most of the above means of restoration are applicable to various other cases of apparent death; whether from hanging, apoplectic and convulsive fits, cold, suffocation by damps, or noxious vapours proceeding from coal-mines, the confined air of wells, cisterns, caves, or the must of fermenting liquors.

Whenever any good has been produced by the means recommended, the person who has superintended the cure is desired to write a circumstantial account of it to Dr. William Hawes, Secretary to the Society, Great Eastcheap.

MEDICAL SOCIETY. This Society was instituted in the year 1752, with a view to collect and publish medical observations and enquiries. Five volumes of this excellent work have already been published, and a sixth is said to be in the press. The meetings are held once a fortnight, on Mondays in the evening, at the Mitre Tavern, in Fleet-street.

SOCIETY OF PHYSICIANS. Of the origin of this Society, instituted about the year 1764, an account is given by the late Dr. Fothergill, in his Essay on the Character of Dr. Alexander Russell. The election of members is by ballot, and none but licentiates of the College of Physicians are eligible. The members meet once a fortnight, on Wednesdays, in the evening, at Old Slaughter's Coffee-house, for the purpose of conversing on the prevailing diseases, &c. and once a quarter they dine together at the Crown and Anchor Tavern in the Strand.

SOCIETY FOR THE IMPROVEMENT OF MEDICAL KNOWLEDGE.
This Society was established in February, 1782, for the purpose of collecting useful essays and observations for publication. Several very interesting papers have already been read at their meetings, which are held once a fortnight, on Tuesday evening, at Old Slaughter's Coffee-house. The Society dine together once a quarter. At these quarterly meetings, candidates for admission, who have been proposed by two Members at the preceding general meeting, are ballotted for. A President, Treasurer, two Secretaries, and a Committee for revising and selecting papers for publication, are elected annually by ballot.

Keeper of the Reading Room,

THE ROYAL SOCIETY. Bishop Sprat, in his history of the Royal Society, informs us, that it was about the year 1650, "some space after the end of the civil wars at Oxford, in the apartments of Dr. Wilkins, at Wadham College, that the first meetings were held which laid the foundation of this institution." "The University—adds the historian—had at that time many members of its own, who had begun a free way of reasoning, and was also frequented by some gentlemen of philosophical minds, whom the misfortunes of the kingdom, and the security and ease of a retirement amongst Gownsmen, had drawn thither." The principal members of the infant society were, Dr. Seth Ward, the Hon. Mr. Boyle, Dr. Wilkins, Sir William Petty, Mr. Matthew Wren, Dr. Wallis, Dr. Goddard, Dr. Willis, Dr. Bathurst, Dr. Christopher Wren, and Mr. Rook. The meetings of these learned and ingenious persons continued without any great intermission at Oxford, till about the year 1658; but then being called away to different parts of the kingdom, and the greater number of them coming to London, they usually met at Gresham College, at the Wednesdays and Thursdays lectures of Dr. Wren and Mr. Rook, where they were joined by Lord Brouncker, Mr. afterwards Lord Brereton, Sir Paul Neil, Mr. John Evelyn, Mr. Henshaw, Mr. Slingby, Sir George Ent, Dr. Timothy Clark, Dr. Croone, Mr. Ball, Mr. Hill, and several other gentlemen, whose inclinations lay the same way. During the state of anarchy which succeeded the death of Cromwell, the meetings were discontinued, but took place again soon after the Restoration, and in a short time, the society became celebrated throughout Europe; for the design being favoured by Sir Robert Moray, Sir Gilbert Talbot, and some other ingenious men, who had followed King Charles II. in his exile, his Majesty granted them a charter, dated July 15th, 1662, whereby they were denominated the Royal Society of London, for improving Natural Knowledge; and made a body corporate, to consist of a president, council, and fellows. In this charter, which was confirmed and enlarged the following year, his Majesty declared himself their founder and patron, and impowered them to purchase lands, make by-laws, and to have a common seal, which they have liberty to alter at pleasure. William Lord Viscount Brouncker was named in the charter to be the first president, and John Wilkins, D. D. and Henry Oldenburgh, Esq. to be the first secretaries. A treasurer and seventeen other members of the council were appointed in the same manner.

The society continued to hold their meetings in Gresham College for near the space of fifty years, when they removed to their house in Crane-court, Fleet-street, and from thence, in 1780, to their present apartments in Somerset-place, in the Strand. In 1725, they procured a licence for purchasing in mortmain, to the yearly value of one thousand pounds.

The ordinary meetings of the society are weekly, upon Thursday, beginning at eight o'clock in the evening, and continuing about an hour, at the discretion of the president. At these meetings, when the president hath taken the chair, the senior secretary reads the minutes of the preceding meeting, after which the junior secretary mentions the presents made to them since the last meeting, gives notice of any candidate that stands proposed for election into the Society, and then reads letters and papers presented to the Society. It is usual for the president to adjourn the Society during the long vacation, from June till November, and likewise for a fortnight at Christmas, Easter, and Whitsuntide.

The annual meeting for the election of officers, and the disposal of the Copleian medal*, is on the feast of St. Andrew. After this business is over, the Society dine together.

Every person to be elected a fellow of the Royal Society must be recommended by three or more members, in a paper signed by themselves, and specifying the name, rank, profession, qualifications, and the usual place of residence of such person; all which must be certified from their personal acquaintance with him. This certificate, after being read at a meeting of the Society, by one of the secretaries, must be fixed up in the common meeting-room of the Society, at ten† several ordinary meetings, before the said candidate can be put to the vote. The votes are taken by ballot; and no person can be declared elected, unless he have in his favour two thirds of the number voting. There must likewise be present thirty members at the least.

* So called in honour of Sir Godfrey Copley, Bart. who bequeathed a sum of money to the Society, the interest of which he appointed annually to be disposed of by trustees by him named, and after their decease, by the president and council of the Royal Society for the time being, to any person that should make any new discovery in art or nature, or present any paper to the Society that should be thought worthy of such distinction. But the Society, since the year 1737, have judged it more eligible and honourable to give this donation in the form of a medal.

† There is an exception to this rule in favour of foreign sovereign princes, ambassadors to the court of Great-Britain, peers, sons of peers, and privy counsellors of Great-Britain or Ireland, all of whom may be proposed by any single member, and be put to the vote for election on the same day, there being present the competent number of persons for making elections.

Every person elected a fellow is required to appear for his admission on or before the fourth ordinary meeting of the Society, after his election, or within such further time as shall be granted by the Society or Council, upon cause shewn to either of them; otherwise his election is void.

The admission of a fellow into the Society is in the following manner: He first subscribes the obligation in the charter-book, and is then introduced by a member to the president, who rises from his chair, and taking him by the hand, says to him, in the presence of the Society, "I do by the authority, and in the name, of the Royal Society of London for improving Natural Knowledge, admit you a member thereof."

Any person residing in foreign parts, and not a subject of the British dominions, who is desirous of becoming a fellow of this Society, must have a certificate in his favour, signed by at least three fellows of the Society upon the foreign list, who shall in such certificate attest, of their personal knowledge, that such candidate, by his philosophical learning and abilities, is duly qualified, and likely to become an useful member of the Society: and every such candidate must have a certificate signed by at least three fellows on the home list, who shall attest the preceding qualifications, either of their own personal knowledge, or from the works or correspondence of such candidate.

Such certificate so signed, after having been read to the Society, is to be fixed up in their public meeting room, and continue there from the 30th of November to the 30th of May next following; and at the weekly meeting of the Society, on, or next after, the 30th of May, the foreigner thus recommended, is to be proposed to the Society for election, and put to the ballot.—This regulation, however, is not to extend to such foreigners who, being at the time resident, or having been resident in Great-Britain, shall desire to be elected into the Society, in the same manner, and upon the same conditions, with the home members, paying their admission-fees, and composition-money*.

The Society's library is open two days in the week during the meetings of the Society; viz. Monday and Thursday in the morning, from eleven till two of the clock; and during the recesses of the Society, only one day in the week, namely, Thursday, from eleven till two. During these times, the librarian attends for the accommodation of such fellows of the Society as shall come to read the printed books or manuscripts, and of any other persons who shall bring a written permission from the president, or any other member of the council, or who shall be introduced by a fellow in person.

The Philosophical Transactions were for many years published in numbers, and the printing of them was always, from time to time, the single act of the respective secretaries, till the year 1752, when the Society thought fit that a committee should be appointed to reconsider the papers read before them, and to select out of them such as they should judge most proper for publication in the future Transactions. The members of the council constitute a standing committee for this purpose. They meet on the first Thursday of every month, and no less than seven of the members of the committee (of which number the president, or in his absence, a vice-president, is always to be one) are allowed to be a quorum capable of acting in relation to such papers. The question with regard to the publication of any paper is always decided by the majority of votes taken by ballot.

* Every person elected a fellow on the home list pays the sum of five guineas for admission-money, and is likewise required farther to contribute towards the expences of the Society, previous to his admission, either by paying twenty six guineas in lieu of all future contributions, or by executing a bond, thereby subjecting himself to a payment of two pounds twelve shillings a year to the Society, so long as he shall continue a fellow thereof. But if the person elected resides beyond sixty miles from London, he is not allowed to give bond, but must pay down the composition-money before he be admitted, or his name be allowed to be printed in the list of fellows.

The Philosophical Transactions are printed at the expence of the Society, and each fellow is entitled to receive one copy gratis of every volume published after his admission into the Society.

C A M B R I D G E S H I R E .

Cambridge.

The University at this place dates its institution from the year 1257. It consists of thirteen colleges, and four halls. Each college has its school and library, of which those of Trinity and St. John are the most considerable. The Professorship of Physic was founded in 1540; but the other medical chairs are of a much more recent date: that of Anatomy dates only from 1702, and those of Chemistry and Botany from 1707. In 1728, a Professorship for Fossilogy was erected by Dr. Woodward, (famous for his dispute with Freind and Mead) with a salary of 150 l. a year. The master and fellows of St. Catharine Hall are trustees of an hospital for the sick and lame poor, for the building and furnishing of which Dr. Addenbrooke left 4000 l. We are indebted to a very intelligent and obliging correspondent for the following sketch of the medical education at Cambridge.

" The duty of Dr. Plumptre, as regius professor of " physic, is to give public lectures to the university in
" physic; to take the part of an opponent in the dis-
" putes held in the physic schools, and to read a disser-
" tation (called a determination) upon the last question
" in debate, and which he himself had proposed. He " presents the candidates for all degrees in physic to the " vice-chancellor and university assembled. He creates
" the doctors in physic, and examines for admissions ad
" prælicandum.

" Dr. Collignon, professor of anatomy, reads one " course of lectures every year in the anatomy schools,
" for which purpose two subjects are yearly sent to him
" from London.

" Dr. Pennington, professor of chymistry, gives lec" tures in the chymical schools, where there is an appa" ratus proper for the purpose.

" The Rev. Mr. Martyn, professor of botany, gives " lectures in the botanic garden, where there is an ad" mirable collection of plants, maintained in excellent
" order. A great number of exotics are now cultivated
" there with success, imported from the islands in the " South Seas, and other places.

" Mr. Martyn likewise gives lectures in the other " branches of natural history; and has a good collection
" of animals and fossils.

" The Rev. Mr. Green, Woodwardian professor of " fossils, has, under his care, an excellent collection of " English

" English fossils, left to the university by the late Dr. Woodward. He gives lectures in fossilogy, and publishes a thesis on the subject annually.

" A student in physic cannot take the degree of M. B. until the expiration of six years after his admission, during which time he must reside nine terms in the university, and keep two public disputes, in one of which he acts as respondent, and in the other as opponent. After having been five years a bachelor of physic, he may take the degree of M. D. upon keeping three public disputes, in two of which he is respondent.

" The public disputes are managed thus: The respondent proposes one question (which is a medical proposition admitting of debate) and the professor of physic proposes another. The respondent reads a thesis on his own question, against which question the professor and opponents bring arguments. The respondent defends both his own question and the professor's, against the professor and the other opponents, who are students in physic. The professor then reads his determination. These debates are carried on in the Latin tongue, and are attended by a large audience, amongst whom is generally the vice-chancellor.

" There are medical fellowships in some of the colleges, and some exhibitions, to support the students while they are under-graduates."

The academical year at Cambridge is divided into the Lent, Easter, and Michaelmas terms.

The Lent term begins Jan. 13, and ends April 11.

— Easter ——— April 30, ——— July 24.

— Michaelmas ——— Oct. 10, ——— Dec. 16.

Degrees are conferred in the several faculties annually on the first Tuesday of July, which is the Dies Commemorationis, or Commencement.

Plymouth.

The ROYAL HOSPITAL for sick and hurt Seamen and Marines, is situated at Stonehouse, about a mile from Plymouth. It is built of rough marble, with Purbeck rusticated coyns, and though without ornament, acquires great dignity from its bulk and simplicity. The Hospital forms a square, and consists of ten buildings, besides offices, detached from each other, with a view to prevent the spreading of fire or contagion, and for the advantage of ventilation. There are six wards in each building, and sufficient room for twenty beds in each ward, so that 1200 patients may be conveniently received into the Hospital.

The ROYAL HOSPITAL at HASLAR for the reception and cure of sick and wounded seamen and marines was begun in 1746, and finished in 1762. It contains 1884 beds for patients, besides the necessary apartments for the different attendants. It is a regular brick building in the middle of a field or airing-ground, of near a mile in extent, and is situated on the west shore of Portsmouth harbour, near the entrance. It consists of eighty-five wards, one of which for consumptive patients, is an hundred feet in length, and fifty in breadth; the rest are sixty feet in length and twenty-two only in breadth. The wards for small-pox and other infectious fevers, are in each wing separated from the main building by a piazza. Each ward has its water-closet communicating with drains, through which the sea is made to flow at every tide. Above these drains are cellars that are perfectly dry. There are likewise in the Hospital a

The LIVERPOOL INFIRMARY was first opened for the reception of patients in 1749. It is advantageously situated at the entrance of the town, and by means of some late judicious alterations, is well ventilated. But the number of patients offering for admission being greater than the original building could conveniently accommodate, a new wing is now added. This, when completed, will make room for the admission of 120 patients, besides keeping one or two wards vacant alternately for the purpose of thoroughly cleansing and purifying them; or, in case of emergency, of admitting a greater number of sick. The Physicians and Surgeons attend it gratis.

The LIVERPOOL DISPENSARY * was instituted in 1778. The business was transacted a few years in a small rented house; but the great increase of patients rendered a larger building necessary: the governors therefore purchased a lot of ground in a central situation with respect to the town, and in 1781 erected thereon a building, perhaps equal in elegance, size, and convenience, to any similar institution in the kingdom †. The parish allows one hundred guineas annually towards the expences of this charity; the rest is defrayed by voluntary contributions. At the end of the fourth year there had been admitted 37,580 patients, chiefly such as were excluded by the rules of the Infirmary, from admission there as in-patients. Among these is included a number of difficult cases in midwifery, which were attended by the Surgeons to this charity. The Physicians and Surgeons attend gratis.

* The Blue-coat hospital, the Borough gaol, the house of correction, a Lock hospital for venereal patients, and the workhouse, a spacious building, which at present contains upwards of 800 poor, are all attended by the Physicians and Surgeons of the Dispensary.

† Although there is a very good public library in Liverpool, yet as very few medical books are admitted into it, a subscription has lately been set on foot for the purpose of forming a MEDICAL LIBRARY for this town and neighbourhood nearly on the plan of that at LEEDS. The books are to be kept, for the present, at the Dispensary; and to prevent the Society from ever being dissolved, and the books divided among the subscribers, they have entered into an agreement that the books, in such case, shall be sold for the benefit of the Infirmary and Dispensary. The subscription is fixed at half a guinea per annum.

Manchester.

THE MANCHESTER INFIRMARY\* was founded in 1752. It is a long narrow building, situated on the highest point of ground about the town, and contains sixty-five beds. The principal wards are fifteen feet high, and the largest of them do not contain more than thirteen beds. They are all of them well ventilated, and as a proof of the advantage an hospital derives from this circumstance, it is observable, that in the present building, the number of deaths has been only in the proportion of 1 in 24  $\frac{1}{2}$ ; whereas in a small crowded house, which was hired as a temporary infirmary, at the first institution of this charity, it was 1 in 18  $\frac{1}{2}$ .

THE LUNATIC HOSPITAL, instituted in 1764, contains seventy beds, and is attended by the same Physicians, &c. as the Infirmary.

THE LITERARY and PHILOSOPHICAL SOCIETY of MANCHESTER owes its origin to a few gentlemen, inhabitants of the town, who many years ago met together once a week for the purpose of conversing on literary and philosophical subjects. These meetings were continued,

* A compleat and elegant set of Baths, is lately opened near the Infirmary, with suitable accommodations for Gentlemen and Ladies; consisting of the following apartments.

1. Two Rooms, 17 feet by 13, in each of which is a Medicated Vapor, and one Hot-water Bath.
  2. A Buxton Bath, for Gentlemen, 22 feet long and 10 broad, with three dressing-rooms adjoining.
  3. A Buxton Bath, for Ladies, 12 feet long and 6 broad, with two dressing-rooms.
  4. Two Dry Sweating Rooms.
  5. A Cold Bath, for Gentlemen, 16 feet by 8.
  6. Ditto, for Ladies, 12 feet by 6, with two dressing-rooms to each.
  7. Two rooms for company to wait in when the Baths are engaged.
  8. A room which contains the coppers, &c. for heating the water and preparing the vapor, from whence it is conveyed by pipes to the different Baths in the other rooms.
- The water in the Buxton Baths is heated by means of a copper placed at the end of each Bath.

To the Buxton and Cold Baths are recesses for pumping on any particular part.

A separate set of Baths is likewise provided for the use of the patients, in the Infirmary and Lunatic Hospital.

with some interruption, for several years; and many respectable persons being desirous of becoming members, the number was soon increased so much, as to induce the founders of the society to extend their original design. Presidents, and other officers, were elected; a code of laws, and a regular society constituted. The number of members is limited to fifty; but this limitation does not preclude any number of gentlemen distinguished for their literary or philosophical abilities, and residing at such distances from Manchester as to prevent their attendance at the usual meetings of the society, from being elected honorary members. The election of members is by ballot. The officers of the society are chosen annually on the last Wednesday in April. A great number of valuable essays have already been read at the meetings.

The WARRINGTON ACADEMY, an excellent Seminary of general learning, was established in 1757, under the patronage and direction of many persons of rank and erudition. No student is admitted under fourteen years of age.

* Removed hither from Manchester.

† About a mile from Warrington is ORFORD HALL, the seat of John Blackburne, Esq. whose garden has long been celebrated by all true lovers of botany, both in England and abroad, his collection being one of the oldest in the Kingdom. Mr. Pennant, in one of his ingenious publications, observes, that this Gentleman from his earliest life, like another Evelyn, has made his garden the employ and amusement of his leisure hours; and been most successful in every part he has attempted. Mr. Blackburne has, indeed, an universal knowledge in the culture of plants. He was the second in these kingdoms that cultivated the Pine Apple: his collection of hardy exotics is exceedingly numerous; and his collection of hot-house plants is at least equal to that at Kew. In short, he neglects no branch of botany. He has the aquatic plants in their proper element, and the rock plants on artificial rocks; so that you may here be betrayed into a bog, by attempting to gather those of the morals. A catalogue of this excellent collection has been lately published.

At Balmborough Castle there are an INFIRMARY for particular objects, chiefly for sick and wounded seamen; and a GENERAL DISPENSARY for the poor, who are here supplied with Medicines every Saturday; and those who cannot be sufficiently relieved as out-patients, or conveniently received into the Infirmary, are, on the recommendation of the Surgeon and Matron, admitted into the County Hospital at Newcastle.

This humane institution is due to Lord Crew's Trustees. They have likewise constructed hot and cold baths, and a sea-water bath, all of which are for the use not only of the patients belonging to the charity, but of any persons who will pay a trifling gratuity for filling them. They have also provided an electrical apparatus, two sets of an apparatus for drowned persons, and surgical instruments of every kind; all of which, particularly the latter, are occasionally lent to the surgeons in the neighbourhood.

A blue flag with an union quarter is hung out whenever the Surgeon, Mr. Cockayne, of Wooller, attends at the Castle.

Mr. Pringle, of Belford, is Assistant Surgeon, but has no salary, nor is his attendance required except when the Surgeon is absent; and then he receives the usual pay, which is fifteen shillings for three hours attendance every Saturday morning.

OXFORDSHIRE.

Oxford.

The UNIVERSITY of OXFORD consists of twenty colleges and five halls †. Alfred is supposed by some to have been its founder; but that prince appears rather to have restored it, in an age of confusion and ignorance, and to have been the father of that establishment and security, which, notwithstanding some temporary shocks and interruptions, it has maintained ever since. Alfred erected certain schools or halls, and assigned pensions to the students. The first college of the University, incorporated by royal charter, was that of Walter de Merton, A. D. 1274; about which time, 15,000 scholars are reported to have been resident here: but in the reign of Henry III. the University is said to have consisted of double that number. The number of medical students, however, has never been considerable. They have resorted of later years to Leyden and Edinburgh, as they did formerly to Montpellier and Padua. But the following extract from the LONDON MEDICAL JOURNAL, vol. iii. will shew that the present medical professors of Oxford, animated with a liberal zeal for reformation and improvement, are exerting their endeavours to render the University useful as a school of physic.

“ The Right Hon. George Henry Earl of Litchfield, “ late chancellor of this university, dying in 1772, be“ queathed, after the demise of his lady, the sum which “ should arise from the sale of his house in London,

† Of the numerous halls, hostels, or inns, which were the only academical houses originally possessed by the students of Oxford, only five subsist at present. These societies are neither endowed nor incorporated. They are subject to their respective principals, whose salary arises from the room-rent of the house.

" and the furniture thereof, in trust, to the then chan" cellor of Oxford, the bishop of Oxford, and the pre" sident of St. John's College, for the establishment of a " Clinical professorship in the Radcliffe Infirmary. Her
 " ladyship died in the year 1779; when the sale of the " said house and furniture produced, clear of all ex-
 " pence, 4256 l. which sum was vested in the Three per " Cent. Consol. and purchased 7079 l. stock, the interest
 " whereof amounts annually to 212 l. which is the salary
 " of the professor, who, by the noble benefactor's will
 " is to be elected by the members of Convocation. No
 " person is eligible who has not taken a doctor's degree
 " in physic at least five years before such election; and
 " by the statutes, drawn up by the present trustees, he is " required to give constant daily attendance, with the " pupils, on certain select patients in the Infirmary, and
 " twice in each week to read a lecture on their cases,
 " during the winter months, from the beginning of No" vember to the latter end of March. Dr. Parsons was " unanimously elected the first professor in 1781. This " establishment was intended by the founder for the pro" motion of the study of physic in Oxford; and that his " great design may not be frustrated, the Convocation
 " have abridged the time required for taking degrees in
 " physic, one year after admission to regency in arts,
 " (instead of three) being now sufficient for the degree
 " of bachelor of physic, and three years from the de" gree of bachelor to that of doctor, instead of four, as " formerly. The physicians resident in the place have " given their assistance to the design. Dr. Parsons con" tinues to read two courses in anatomy every year.
 " Dr. Wall reads two courses in chemistry. A course
 " of lectures on the practice of physic will next year be " read by Dr. Vivian, and on physiology by Dr. Smith.
 " The Rev. Mr. Shaw teaches botany, and Dr. Aulstin
 " delivers mathematical lectures. The number of stu" dents in physic is already much increased, and they " have formed themselves into a MEDICAL SOCIETY,
 " which has regular weekly meetings during the winter
 " months, and of which Martin Wall, M. D. is presi" dent, and William Aulstin, M. B. vice-president."

Among the colleges of Oxford, we shall content ourselves with noticing University College, and Christ's Church College, as being both of them indebted to the munificence of medical men; the former, to Dr. Radcliffe, and the latter, to Dr. Lee. Dr. Radcliffe bequeathed * the sum of five thousand pounds towards erecting the master's lodgings, which take up the east, and part of the north side of the College. The same physician settled 600 l. per annum on the College for * The Doctor, in his life-time, had testified his regard for this college, in which he had received the best part of his education, by causing a rich and elegant window of painted glass to be placed over the altar of the chapel, at his own expence, as appears by the following inscription.

 D. D.

Joan. Radcliffe, M. D. Hujus Collegii Quondam Socius,
 A. D. M.D.C.LXXXVII.

He is called Socius, not that he was a fellow; but being senior scholar, had the same privileges, though not an equal revenue, with the fellows.

two travelling fellowships *. The fellows are required to be at least regent masters of arts, and receive 300l. per annum each for ten years, five of which are spent abroad in observing the state of foreign physic, &c. A statue of the doctor is placed in a niche over the gate, on the inside of the eastern court of the college.

Christ's Church College was founded by Cardinal Woolsey; but, among the numerous benefactors to it since his time, we find the name of the late Dr. Lee, who bequeathed twenty thousand pounds for the support of several new institutions in the College; one of these is an anatomical school, with an ample stipend for a lecturer.

It would lead us into too long and tedious a digression, to describe all the public buildings of the University; we shall therefore only mention some of the principal ones in a summary way; as the Radcliffe and Bodleian libraries, the Theatre, Ashmolean Museum, Clarendon Printing-house, &c.

The RADCLIFFE LIBRARY is so named, in honour of its founder, who bequeathed 40,000l. † for that purpose, and likewise 100l. per annum for the purchase of books; and an annual salary of 150l. to the librarian, who is nominated by the great officers of state. The first stone of this sumptuous edifice was laid in June 1737, and the whole building completed in 1747.

The BODLEIAN LIBRARY takes its name from Sir Thomas Bodley, who may justly be considered as its founder, the collection of books till his time having been small, neglected, and of little value. This liberal-minded person, in the account of his life written by himself, after giving us the motives of his retiring from court, and choosing a private life, goes on thus: "Whereupon examining exactly for the rest of my life what course I might take, and having sought (as I thought) all the ways to the wood, to select the most proper, I concluded at the last to set up my staff at the library-door in Oxon, being thoroughly persuaded, that in my solitude and surcease from the common-wealth affairs, I could not busy myself to better purpose, than by reducing that place (which then in every part lay ruined and waste) to the public use of students. For the effecting whereof, I found myself furnished, in a competent proportion, of such four kinds of aids, as unless I had them all, there was no hope of good success. For without some kind of knowledge, as well in the learned and modern tongues, as in sundry other sorts of scholastic literature; without some purse-ability to go through with the charge; without great store of honourable friends to further the design; and without special good leisure to follow such a work, it could but have proved a vain attempt and inconsiderate." Camden, speaking of this undertaking, says, it was a task suited to the dignity of a crowned head.

* The present travelling fellows are Dr. Robertson, and Dr. Sibthorp, jun.

† Besides these immense legacies to the University of Oxford, Dr. Radcliffe bequeathed 600l. per annum to St. Bartholomew's Hospital in London.

The vestibule or first gallery, with the proscholium under it, was built by Sir Thomas, who furnished the whole with a collection made with prodigious care and expence. He likewise assigned an estate of two hundred pounds per annum, for the maintenance of a librarian *, &c. and the support of a public fund for the library, adding a body of statutes †, for the regulation of his new institution. The original stock has been greatly enriched by the accession of many valuable collections of manuscripts, particularly Greek and Oriental; besides large additions of choice and useful books, from various benefactors.

The THEATRE, (in which are celebrated the public acts, and the annual commemoration of benefactors to the University, on the 2d of July, instituted by the late Lord Crewe, Bishop of Durham, with some other solemnities) was erected from the design of Sir C. Wren in 1699, at the expence of Archbishop Sheldon, then chancellor; who having bestowed 15,000*l.* on building it, endowed it with 2000*l.* to purchase lands for its perpetual repair. When the University is assembled in this building, the Vice-chancellor, with the two Proctors, are seated in the center of the semicircular part; on each hand are the young noblemen and doctors; the Masters of Arts in the area. The rest of the University, and strangers of both sexes, are placed in the galleries.

The ASHMOLEAN MUSEUM was founded by Elias Ashmole, Esq. who, in 1677, made an offer to bestow upon the University his collection of natural bodies, together with his coins and manuscripts, on condition that they should erect a building for their reception. This offer was accepted, and the building finished in 1682, under the conduct of Sir Christopher Wren. Many valuable additions have been made to the Museum since its first foundation; and, among others, the collections of Martin Lister, M. D. of Dr. Plott, and Mr. Edward Llywd, its two first keepers, the Reverend William Boilase, Bishop Gibson, Thomas Brathwaite, Esq. &c. Besides the room in which the curiosities are repositied, there are three small libraries; the first, called Ash-

* By Sir Thomas's will, forty pounds per annum were appointed to be paid to the head librarian, ten pounds to the sub-librarian, and eight to the junior.

† Among other provisions in these statutes, are the following: 1. That the librarian shall be a graduate, without care of souls, and unmarried: 2. That none shall enjoy the privilege of studying in the library, but only doctors and licentiates of the three faculties; bachelors of divinity, masters of arts, bachelors of physic and law, and bachelors of arts of two years standing; also Lords, and the sons of members of Parliament, and those who become benefactors to the Library; and that all such before admission to such privileges, shall take an oath prescribed in the statutes: 3. That any person who shall be convicted of dismembering or purloining, or altering any word or passage of any book, shall be publicly degraded, and expelled the University: 4. That eight overseers or visitors of the Library, (viz. the Vice-chancellor and Proctors, the three professors of divinity, law and physic, and the two regius professors of Hebrew and Greek) shall be appointed to inspect the state, both of the building and the books, the behaviour of the keeper, &c. annually on the 8th of November; and that on the visitation-day, forty shillings shall be allowed to be expended on a dinner or supper for the visitors; and that gloves shall be presented to them by the head, viz. seven pair of ten shillings the pair to the five professors and two proctors, and one pair of twenty shillings price to the vice-chancellor, besides forty shillings in money to each of the proctors, and twenty nobles to the vice-chancellor.

mole's Study, contains the printed books and manuscripts of the founder, and likewise the manuscripts of Sir W. Dugdale, author of the Monasticon; the second is that of Dr. Lister; and the last that of Anthony Wood.

The CLARENDON PRINTING-HOUSE is a magnificent structure, and was built in 1711, by the profits arising from the sale of Lord Clarendon's History of the Rebellion; the copy of which had been presented to the University by his two sons, the Lords Clarendon and Rochester.

The PHYSIC GARDEN, which is situated to the south of Magdalen College, contains five acres. It was founded by the Earl of Danby in 1632. The ground is divided into four quarters. At the entrance, on the right and left, are two neat and convenient green-houses, stocked with a valuable collection of exotics. The quarters are filled with such plants as grow naturally. Without the walls on the east is an excellent hot-house. This garden was greatly indebted to Dr. Sherrard, who assigned 3000*l.* for the maintenance of a professor, and has been rendered famous by the writings of Morrison, Bobart, and Dillenius: after the death of the latter, in 1747, the present professor was nominated by the College of Physicians, in whom all future nominations are vested.

The Academical Year is divided into the four terms following, viz.

Lent term, which begins January 14, and ends March 27.

Easter term, — April 14 — May 20.

Trinity term, — June 2 — July 17.

Michaelmas term, — October 11 — December 17.

Degrees are conferred annually on the day of the Act, which is on the first Monday after the 6th of July. The exercises for degrees consist of public disputations and lectures.

The GENERAL HOSPITAL at BATH is supported by voluntary subscription, and is open for the reception of patients from any part of the kingdom, the poor of Bath only excepted, the intention of the Charity being to admit only such cases as require the use of the Bath waters. Patients who apply for admittance into this Hospital, are required to send an account of their case, &c. duly attested, to the Secretary of the Charity. Such as are judged to be proper objects have notice given them, by letter, of the day they may depend on being received into the house. This Hospital is attended gratis by three physicians and three surgeons.

WILTSHIRE.

Salisbury.

The SALISBURY INFIRMARY was established in 1767. It is a handsome building, in an airy situation, and contains seventy-five beds, five of which are for venereal patients; but the number of patients at any one time in the house seldom exceeds forty. This charity is attended gratis by two Physicians, two Surgeons, and a superintending Apothecary. The business of the latter is to examine the drugs, druggist's bills, &c. One of the Apothecaries of the town is elected annually for this purpose.

This Institution dates from 1583, but at first, in this, as in all the other Colleges of Scotland, only divinity, school-philosophy, and the languages, were taught. The first medical professors instituted at Edinburgh, were, Sir Robert Sibbald, and Dr. Archibald Pitcairne, in 1685. Those gentlemen, however, were only titular professors; and for thirty years after that period a few lectures on plants and chemistry, and once in two or three years the dissection of a human body, was all that was done by way of teaching physic in this metropolis.

* Three apothecaries reside at this place, but our correspondent was unable to send us their names.

It was about the year 1720 that a plan was first set on foot to establish a School of Physic here in imitation of that at Leyden. At that time the late Dr. Alexander Monro being appointed professor of anatomy and surgery, began a course of lectures on those subjects; as did Dr. Alison on the materia medica and botany. Dr. Rutherford was soon afterwards appointed to teach the practice of physic, and Dr. Sinclair and Dr. Plummer the theory of physic and chemistry. The institution of an infirmary gave rise to the clinical lectures, and since that time this university has gradually risen to be one of the most celebrated schools of physic in Europe.

Of late years the number of students has seldom been less than one thousand, about four hundred of whom have usually been engaged in the study of physic.

The medical classes are opened on the last Wednesday of October, and closed at the beginning of May. During this winter session, as it is called, all the several branches of physic, botany excepted, are taught by their respective professors. Clinical lectures are likewise read twice a week by two of the professors. During the summer session, which begins in May, and ends in August, there are lectures on botany*, and likewise clinical and midwifery lectures.

The student pays three guineas to each of the professors, whose lectures he attends for the session; three guineas to the infirmary for the privilege of attending the practice of physic and surgery there during the space of one year; and a farther sum of three guineas if he attends the clinical lectures, no person being allowed to visit the clinical wards, unless he has previously entered himself as a pupil at the infirmary. The sum of half a crown† paid at his matriculation entitles him to the use of the library, where he may either attend to read three days in the week, when it is opened and well aired for the convenience of the students, or he may take any number of books to his own apartments, on depositing a sum equivalent to their value in the hands of the librarian, which sum is returned to him when he brings the books back.

There are annually two public days, one in June, and the other in September, for conferring degrees, which in this as in the other Scotch universities, are only those of Master of Arts and Doctor.

The BOTANIC GARDEN‡, which may be considered as an appendage to the university, is situated at a small distance from Edinburgh, on the west side of the foot walk to Leith. It consists of five acres, and was planted about thirteen years ago.

In the east division is a large area called the School of Botany, where the plants are systematically arranged. On each side of this area are placed the officinal plants, shrubs, and trees. This division contains about 2000 species of plants.

The west division, of which the conservatories|| and basin of water form the center, affords an irregular agreeable plantation, called the Sylvia Botanica. The principal aim here has been to protect the tender plants by a proper arrangement of hardy trees, and so to place those, that at least one of every species may be seen in the serpentine walk around this division.

Among the scarce exotics successfully cultivated in this garden, we shall content ourselves with enumerating the following: The Caira§ from the East Indies, a

* With a view to excite a spirit of emulation among his pupils, Dr. Hope, the Professor of Botany, disposes of a gold medal annually. This prize is given to the student, who produces the best Hortus ficus.

† This is the sum required by the statutes; but the subscription is from half a crown to half a guinea, or a guinea, according to the ability and liberality of the student; the money collected in this way, together with the sum of 5l. paid by each Professor at his admission, goes towards the purchase of books, and is the only fund for that purpose.

‡ In 1778, Dr. Hope erected a monument in this garden to the memory of the celebrated Linnaeus. It consists of a vase supported on a pedestal, with this inscription:

LINNEO POSUIT JOH. HOPE.

|| The conservatories extend 140 feet in front, and consist of a green-house in the center, and a hot-house at each end.

species of Mimosa unknown to Linnaeus; Illicium Anisatum, a beautiful aromatic ever-green from Florida; Alstroemeria Colintonia Didymas not described by Linnaeus; the Banana, which has produced ripe fruit; the tea-tree, which has been in full flower; the moving plant, the seeds of which were sent home by Mr. Kerr, surgeon at Dacca; and lastly, several Abyssinian plants, the seeds of which were given to Professor Hope, by the celebrated Mr. Bruce.

In a small inclosure behind the garden is a plantation of about 3000 plants of the true Rhubarb, most of which are now nine or ten years old.

There are twenty-two Professors belonging to the University, but we shall only enumerate those who teach the several branches of Physic, Mathematics, Natural Philosophy, and Natural History.

The R O Y A L   C O L L E G E   o f   P H Y S I C I A N S .

The Physicians of Edinburgh were formed into a college by King Charles II. in 1681. The charter granted to them for that purpose was ratified by the parliament of Scotland in 1685.

By this charter and ratification they were enjoined to visit all the Apothecaries shops within the city and liberties of Edinburgh, at least twice a year, and destroy all insufficient and corrupted drugs. This part of their duty however has been long neglected.

The college had formerly a meeting-room near the Cowgate Port, but this being in a ruinous state, they have lately erected a magnificent hall in the New Town. The extent of this building is about eighty feet in front. In the under floor are lodgings for a Librarian and Porter, and some other apartments. The second floor consists of four apartments, one of which is intended for the ordinary meetings of the college; but the principal apartment is designed for the library; this room is fifty feet in length, thirty in breadth, and twenty in height, and is surrounded on three sides by a gallery. The college has a good collection of medical and philosophical books, the greatest part of which were the property of Dr. Wright of Kersie, upon whose death a donation was made of them to the college by his heir, in consequence of an inclination expressed by the deceased to that effect.

There are five stated meetings of the college every year. One of these is the annual meeting on the first Thursday after the feast of St. Andrew, for the election of officers. On this occasion the college begins with choosing seven Electors, who are to constitute the council for the ensuing year. These Electors retire to a separate apartment, and there nominate a President, two Censors, a Secretary, Treasurer, Fiscal, and Librarian. This election is then announced to the college,

* The stipend of the Professor of Anatomy is 50*l.* per annum, and that of the Professor of Botany 77*l.* 15*s.* 6*d.* The salary of King's Physician is divided between the Professors of the theory and practice of Physic, Chemistry, Materia Medica, and Midwifery, who have no salaries as Professors.

† Botany and the Materia Medica used to be both taught by the late Dr. Alston. At his death a chair was founded for each of these branches in favour of Dr. Home, and Dr. Hope.

‡ The Midwifery Professorship was instituted by the Magistrates of Edinburgh, in favour of the late Professor, Dr. Young.

and the business ends with the new President taking his seat and appointing a Vice-President.

The quarterly meetings, for the admission of Licentiates, election of Fellows, and other business, are held on the first Tuesday of February, May, August, and November. The President has likewise a discretionary power of summoning the college together whenever he thinks fit. No person can be elected a Fellow unless he has been previously admitted a Licentiate of the college, and by a law lately enacted by the college, no Licentiate can be promoted to a Fellowship who practises midwifery or surgery. The Licentiates are entitled to practise within the liberties of the city, but are not summoned to the meetings of the college. Doctors of physic in either of the Scotch universities are entitled to a licence, merely on paying the fees, which amount to about 55l. Graduates of other universities are required to undergo an examination, at which all the fellows have a right to assist. In the election of a Licentiate to a Fellowship, it is required that he shall be proposed at a quarterly meeting by one of the Fellows. This motion being duly seconded, is to be determined at the next ensuing quarterly meeting by ballot. A majority of votes is sufficient for the election of the candidate.

The ROYAL COLLEGE of SURGEONS.

The Surgeons of Edinburgh were incorporated by the Magistrates of that City, so early as the year 1505. This incorporation was afterwards confirmed and new privileges granted to them by a charter in the reign of King William III. They have lately been incorporated anew by a charter dated March 14, 1770, under the name of the ROYAL COLLEGE of SURGEONS. By this charter they are empowered to establish a fund for the widows and children of their members*.

The sons of members, or those persons who have served an apprenticeship of five years to a Surgeon in Edinburgh, are admitted of the College on paying the admission fees, which are considerable. Persons who are not of this description, are required to undergo a previous examination.

All the Surgeons in Edinburgh practise as Apothecaries, and no person is allowed to practise Surgery or Pharmacy in Edinburgh till he has been admitted of this College; nor in the shires of Edinburgh, Berwick, Fife, Peebles, Selkirk and Roxburgh, till he has been examined and approved by the members thereof.

THE ROYAL INFIRMARY OF EDINBURGH, instituted in 1736, and opened for the reception of patients in 1741. The wards are large, and well ventilated, and as some of them are always kept empty, for the sake of their being well aired, the number of patients in the house at one time seldom exceeds one hundred and eighty. From very accurate reports it appears, that the number of deaths in this hospital since the year 1741 has been in the proportion of 1 in 25.

In the attic story is a LYING-IN WARD, fourteen feet high. It has ten windows in it, and contains as many beds. That this ward may be sufficiently purified every year, no patients are admitted into it from the middle of July to the 12th of November. None are received at any time but such as will submit to be delivered by the students.

Two small wards (one for men and the other for women) are set apart for those patients who are to be the subjects of the CLINICAL LECTURES. These are visited every day by one of the Clinical Lecturers, so that the students have an opportunity of noting the progress of each case, and twice a week a Clinical Lecture is delivered in the Infirmary.

Physicians. John Hope, M. D. & Prof. John Steedman, M. D.
James Hamilton, M. D.

Surgeons. All the Members of the College of Surgeons, in rotation, four of them being appointed annually for this purpose.

THE PUBLIC DISPENSARY, instituted in 1776, for the relief of such poor patients as, from the nature of their complaints, are improper objects for an hospital; is supported by subscription, and by medicine money collected from the students who attend the case lectures. This charity must be the more useful, as the Royal Infirmary has no establishment for the relief of out-patients. The two following Physicians attend it gratis every Tuesday and Friday, at one o'clock.

To complete our account of the present state of MEDICAL EDUCATION at EDINBURGH, we shall add a list of the Lectures delivered by different Physicians and Surgeons, at their respective houses in that city, during the winter season.

† Lectures on the cases of patients treated at the Dispensary, are given by DR. DUNCAN and DR. WEBSTER. Besides these, Dr. Duncan gives three separate courses of lectures, viz. One on the Theory of Physic, another on the Practice, and a third on the Materia Medica. Dr. Webster teaches Chemistry. All these lectures are now given at the Dispensary.

The PHILOSOPHICAL SOCIETY.

About the year 1731, the Professors of Physic and some other gentlemen of the medical profession at Edinburgh, formed themselves into a society for collecting and publishing medical essays. The first volume made its appearance in 1732, but the members becoming remiss in their attendance, the care and trouble of compiling those essays fell almost wholly upon the late Dr. Monro.

The Medical was succeeded by the Philosophical Society, which is formed upon the more extensive plan of including all the different branches of natural knowledge, and the antiquities of Scotland. The meetings of the Society were interrupted by the rebellion in 1745, but revived again in 1752; and in 1754 they published the first volume of their collection, under the title of Essays and Observations Physical and Literary. Two other volumes have since made their appearance, and a fourth is said to be in some forwardness. The meetings of the Society are held every month, and at these meetings the members are expected to deliver papers by rotation. After a paper has been read, two members are appointed to examine and deliver in a written report in regard to it, at the next meeting.

The M E D I C A L S O C I E T Y .

This institution appears to have been coeval with the establishment of a regular school of physic in the university. Dr. Fothergill, Dr. Hunter, Dr. Cullen, and others of the most eminent physicians in Britain, were among the first of its members. None of its records, however, of an earlier date than 1737 are now preserved. Since that time the greater part of the medical students at the university, who have distinguished themselves by their industry or diligence, have been members of this institution. In 1778 the society was honoured with a charter, dated at St. James's, the 14th of December of that year. By this charter the members of the society are formed "into one body, politic and corporate, or legal incorporation, under the name and title of the MEDICAL SOCIETY of EDINBURGH†, and as such, and by such name, to have perpetual endurance and succession."

At the meetings of the society, which are held every Saturday evening during the winter season, papers on medical subjects are delivered by the several members in rotation. Four of the members are elected every year, to fill the chair in rotation, with the title of Annual Presidents. The meetings of the society are now held in their own hall, on which they have expended a thousand pounds. This building was opened on the 26th of April, 1776. Besides an apartment for the weekly meetings, it contains a room for their library, and a repository for curious subjects in natural history and anatomy.

The election of ordinary members is by ballot. Three dissentient votes are sufficient to reject a candidate. When an ordinary member has delivered in a certain number of papers, or has conciliated the good opinion of the society in any other manner, they usually elect him an honorary member. This election is likewise by ballot; and the votes in this case must be unanimous. The person thus elected an honorary member receives a diploma (a distinction not granted to ordinary members) and continues to have a vote at the meetings, and to enjoy all the privileges of the ordinary members; but is freed from the obligation of attendance, delivering in papers in rotation, &c. to which the latter are subject. Some few gentlemen have been honoured with honorary diplomas by the society, without having ever been elected ordinary members.

The following list contains the names of all those who have been admitted members of this society from Nov. 26, 1737, to March 4, 1780. The reader will at once perceive that many of the persons are dead, whose names are here recorded. We at first intended to have printed the names of deceased members in Italics, but having found it impossible for us to do this with sufficient accuracy, we have given the list in the same form in which it was printed by the society in 1770. The additions since that time are from a written list, in which our correspondent has omitted to mark the gentlemen who have been elected honorary members, or annual presidents, since the year 1770.

† We have sometimes seen it written the Royal Medical Society, but this is improper. The institution is not the less respectable for being styled in the charter simply The Medical Society of Edinburgh, which is the only name by which it can sue or plead as a body corporate in a Court of Justice.

ABERDEEN.

Aberdeen.

The University at this place was founded in 1477, and consists of two colleges, (King's College and Marischal College) in each of which there is a Professorship of Physic †.

Professor of Physic in King's College.

William Chalmers, M. D.

Professor of Physic in Marischal College.

Alexander Donaldson ‡, M. D.

The ABERDEEN INFIRMARY was founded in 1742. It usually contains from eighty to ninety patients, so that from a thousand to twelve hundred are received and dismissed annually. The number of out-patients relieved in the course of the year has sometimes exceeded two thousand. In 1773, the managers obtained a charter from his Majesty, erecting them into a body corporate, under the name of "The President and Managers of the Infirmary of Aberdeen."

* The Physicians in Scotland (those at Edinburgh excepted) generally practise surgery, and dispense their own medicines.

† These colleges are both together termed the University of Aberdeen, although quite independent of each other. One of them is situated in Old, and the other in New Aberdeen.

‡ Doctor Donaldson neither delivers lectures, nor practises, but resides chiefly upon his estate in the neighbourhood of Aberdeen.

‖ Dr. Livingstone had the sole care of the Infirmary from the year 1752 to 1779, when the two assistant physicians were elected.

The Royal College of Physicians.

Previous to the reign of Charles II. the Physicians of Dublin were not incorporated, nor any College established; and the practice of Physic was chiefly engrossed by empirics and mountebanks. To remedy, in some measure, this abuse, the King, in the nineteenth year of his reign, granted letters patent of incorporation, with many privileges; but their jurisdiction did not extend more than seven miles round the city.

In 1692, Sir Patrick Dun, Knt. M. D. at that time President of the College, petitioned King William and Queen Mary, to grant such a charter to the College as would extend their jurisdiction in medical affairs over the kingdom, and empower them more effectually to remedy all abuses, and to contribute to the advancement of the profession. This petition was granted, and, on delivering up their old Letters Patent, they received the charter, by which they are now regulated, with the usual privileges of perpetual succession, purchasing, &c.

The number of fellows is limited by the charter to fourteen†, from amongst whom are annually chosen a President and four Censors. The President may appoint any one of the Censors Vice-President. On a vacancy, any Physician who is a Doctor of Physic, may, on submitting to an examination, be elected a Fellow. But this is not usual with the College; as the Fellows are generally Doctors of Physic of Trinity College, and are entitled to be immediately admitted without any examination, the election of a Fellow being, in general, a matter of form, and not of examination.

† Hitherto, however, it has seldom exceeded eight or nine.

The College possesses a power of compelling all Physicians, except those who are graduates of Dublin, Oxford or Cambridge, under the penalty of 10*l.* a month, or imprisonment, to submit to an examination, and take out a licence, in order to qualify them to practise in Dublin. This statute however has never been put in execution.

As there is no regular course of lectures on Physic given in the College, there are, of course, no students designed for the profession, that do not go to Paris, Leyden, or Edinburgh to finish their studies, and there take their degrees.

In 1711, Sir Patrick Dun bequeathed an estate, as a foundation for establishing a Professorship of Physic in the College of Physicians in Dublin. This estate has since so risen in value, as at present to bring in upwards of 800*l.* a year.

In 1747, an act of Parliament was obtained for erecting three Professorships on this foundation, instead of one, to be intitled the King's Professorship of Physic, the King's Professor of Surgery and Midwifery, and the King's Professor of Pharmacy and Materia Medica.

The mode of electing these professors is as follows:

On the death or resignation of any of the three Professors, the Examinators, who are the Provost of Trinity College, the Professor of Physic, the President of the College of Physicians, and the two elder Censors, are obliged to give notice, in the London and Dublin Gazettes, that such a Professorship is vacant; and that any Doctor of Physic, in any university, may become a candidate, on giving in his name to the Provost eight days before the time appointed for the election.

The Examinators, after taking an oath of doing impartial justice to the candidates, examine them at three different times, on the different parts of physick; each examination continues for two hours, and the candidate that appears to answer best to the major part of the examiners, is elected professor.

No Roman Catholic can be a candidate, nor any person who enjoys another professorship.

The duty of the Professors is annually to read public lectures in Latin, three several days in the week, on the theory and practice of Physic, Surgery, Midwifery, Pharmacy, and the Materia Medica; the lectures to continue from the first of November to the last day of April. In case of misbehaviour or neglect, the President and College of Physicians are empowered to displace any Professor.

After perusing this account of Sir Patrick Dun's Professorships, the reader will doubtless be not a little astonished on being told, that although few medical chairs are more amply endowed, and no institutions could tend more effectually to the public advantage, yet, that hitherto they have been mere sinecures; so that the laudable and benevolent intentions of the founder have, as yet, proved of no kind of utility, either to the student of Physic, or to the public.

The consequence is, that instead of having a respectable school of Physic in Dublin, in which the different parts of Physic should be regularly taught the students gratis, the Irish, at a great expence, are obliged to send their sons, designed for Physicians, to foreign universities, in order to obtain that abroad, which the liberality of Sir Patrick Dun has so amply provided for them at home.

SURGEONS OF DUBLIN.

The Surgeons of Dublin, since the time of Queen Elizabeth, have been incorporated with the company of Barbers. Repeated applications have been made to Parliament, to procure an act of incorporation for the Surgeons; but notwithstanding the example of the most polished nations in Europe, every attempt to dissolve this absurd and disgraceful union has hitherto been unsuccessful. The correspondent to whom we are indebted for this account, observes, that "from the long continued oppression Ireland has uniformly laboured under, and the Irish having no incentive to promote their industry, the Arts and Sciences may be said, comparatively speaking, to be here only in their infancy.

"As there is no distinct corporation of Surgeons, so there is no regular mode of surgical education; and any man who chooses, may follow the profession: the consequence of which is, that Dublin is crowded with irregulars of every species, as Dentists, Oculists, and Men-midwives, who seldom have served any time, except to Pharmacy. It may easily be conceived what injury the public must sustain from such an host of irregulars.

"The only esteemed regular method in Dublin, of educating a young man to Surgery, is, by indenting him for five years to a Surgeon. After serving his time, he is considered as a Surgeon, and may commence practitioner.

"The Hospitals, although numerous, are, in general, poor, and far from being well provided for; most of them depending on a precarious subscription."

With a view to correct some of the evils so very justly complained of by our correspondent, and to contribute to the advancement of Surgery in Ireland, several gentlemen gentlemen of the profession have lately formed themselves into a Society, called the DUBLIN SOCIETY of SURGEONS.

The ROYAL HOSPITAL, for ancient and maimed officers and soldiers of the army in Ireland, was instituted in 1683.

Physician, Sir Nathaniel Barry, Bart. M. D.
Surgeon, Mr. Edward Crofton. Apothecary, Mr. James Nicholson.

Dr. STEEVENS'S HOSPITAL, incorporated by Parliament in 1730. It contains at present only one hundred and three beds, but is sufficiently spacious to accommodate three hundred patients.

Physician, William Harvey, M. D.
Surgeons, William Ruxton, Esq. Mr. John Whiteway.
Assist. Surgeons, Mr. Samuel Croker King, Mr. James Boyton.
House Surgeon, Mr. Philip Woodroffe. Apothecary, Mr. Thomas Kinsley.

ST. PATRICK'S HOSPITAL for LUNATICS and IDIOTS, founded by the celebrated Dr. Jonathan Swift in 1745, and incorporated by charter in 1746. In this house only thirty-eight lunatics and idiots are admitted, because of the smallness of the fund. But twelve more patients are received, as boarders, at thirty guineas yearly.

Physician and Treasurer, Robert Emmet, M. D.
Surgeon, Mr. John Whiteway. Apothecary, Mr. Edward Pannell.

MERCER'S HOSPITAL, in Stephen-street, was opened for the reception of the sick poor, in August 1734, being then a house built by Mrs. Mary Mercer, containing only ten beds for patients. That number has been gradually increased to sixty-two, which are generally full. The Governors were incorporated by act of Parliament in 1750. The Physician visits the out-patients Mondays and Fridays, and the in-patients Tuesdays and Saturdays. One of the Surgeons attends every day in rotation, and both the Physicians and Surgeons attend gratis.

Physicians, Edward Hill, M. D. C. W. Quin, M. D.
Surgeons, Mr. George Daunt, Mr. Gustavus Hume, Mr. Henry Morris,
Mr. Vernon Lloyd, Mr. Francis Foreside,
Sir Henry Jebb, Knt. Mr. Rice Gibbin.
Assist. Surgeons, Mr. Francis L'Strange, Richard Daniel.

The HOSPITAL for the Relief of Poor LYING-IN-WOMEN was instituted in 1715 by the late Dr. Bartholomew Mosse, who, with the assistance of several charitable benefactions, continued to support it near twelve years, and erected a handsome building in Great-Britain Street for the use of the charity, for which he obtained a charter. The new hospital was opened for the reception of patients in 1757. From December 1757 to October 1782, 17,193 women have been delivered of 9287 boys, and 8194 girls; 286 have had twins, and two others three children at a birth.

Master of the Hospital, Henry Rock, M. D.
Consulting Phys. F. Hutchelton, M. D. Surgeon, S. C. King, Esq.

Assistants to the Master, Sir Henry Jebb, Knt. Dr. Anthony O'Donnell.
Apothecary, Mr. John Wade.

The CHARITABLE INFIRMARY, on the Inns Quay, opened in 1728, was the first institution to which the poor of this city and kingdom ever had access for relief in their different diseases. Six Surgeons were the founders of this charity. It is attended gratis by the Physicians and Surgeons. The Physicians visit their patients on Tuesdays and Fridays, and the Surgeons attend daily in their turns.

Physicians, John Purcell, M. D. Garret Hussey, M. D.

Surgeons, William Ruxton, Esq. Mr. Henry Lyfter, Mr. John Neale, Mr. Robert Bowes, Mr. George Stewart, Mr. Francis M'Evoy,
 Mr. John Ford, Mr. Peter Reily.

The NEW HOSPITAL for INCURABLES, on Lazer's Hill, at present admits forty-two patients, who are maintained and furnished with cloaths and other necessaries at the expence of this charity. Conflables and others receive a reward of half a guinea, every time they bring to this house persons who are found exposing their deformities in the streets.

Physician, Constantine Barbor, M. D.

Surgeons, William Ruxton, Esq. Mr. Henry Morris,
 Mr. Philip Woodroffe, Mr. Richard Daniel.

ST. NICHOLAS'S HOSPITAL was opened in 1753, and contains forty beds for the reception of Surgical patients. The following Surgeons attend alternately every morning from eight till ten, and officiate gratis.

Mr. James Dillon,	Mr. Thomas Meyler,
Mr. Mark Rorke,	Mr. William Dease,
Mr. James Sullivan,	Mr. John Berne.
Mr. Michael Keogh,

The MEATH HOSPITAL, was first instituted for the relief of poor Manufacturers in the Earl of Meath's liberty, but in 1774 an act of parliament was passed making it an Infirmary for the County of Dublin. A large commodious building has lately been erected by the Governors, at upwards of 2000l. expence. The Physicians and Surgeons attend gratis, having resigned to the Hospital the bounty of 100l. annually paid to them by Government.

Physicians, John Charles Fleury, M. D. Francis Hopkins, M. D.
Surgeons, Mr. William Vance, Mr. James Mills, Mr. Arthur Winter, Mr. Israel Read, Mr. O'Brien, Mr. Rooney.

House Apothecary, Mr. William Cockridge.

The LOCK HOSPITAL, in Clarendon Street, instituted by Mr. George Doyle, Surgeon, in 1755, and supported by subscriptions. About 130 patients are admitted into this hospital every year, and the annual expences hitherto have seldom exceeded 160l.

Physicians, Sir Nathaniel Barry, Bart. M. D. Francis Hutchison, M. D.
Surgeons, Mr. George Doyle, Mr. David Fitzgerald.

The INFIRMARY for sick and wounded Soldiers of the Army, in James Street.
Surgeon, Mr. George Stewart. Apothecary, Mr. Henry Hunt.

The Medicine Chancery.

This is one of the many institutions for which the Russians are indebted to PETER the GREAT. That Prince, when in Holland, became acquainted with Dr. Erskine, a Scotch physician, who returned with him to Russia, where the Emperor appointed him his Archiater and Director General of all Physicians, Surgeons, and Apothecaries, within that vast empire; and likewise Chancellor of a new court, called the MEDICINE CHANCERY, by which every thing relating to the different branches of physic is regulated. This court consists of a Chancellor or President, a Vice-president, two Secretaries, and several under Secretaries, &c. The business of the Vice-president is to attend the Chancery twice a day, and receive reports from the different provinces of the empire, and from the fleet and army. He is to inform the Chancellor of whatever happens, and to take his directions, and issue out orders accordingly. There is one chancery at St. Petersburg and another at Moscow; the one is subordinate to the other as the court happens to be at either of those places. Upon extraordinary occasions a certain number of Physicians and Surgeons are convened by the President.

No

No person is suffered to practise in Russia till he has been examined by this Chancery, and procured a written testimonial of his qualifications. If any unlicensed practitioner presumes to prescribe or administer medicines, he is liable to suffer the knoute, to be sent to the galleys during pleasure, and to forfeit all he is worth, one half of which goes to the Empress, and the other to the informer.

No Apothecary is allowed to give medicines without orders from a Physician or Surgeon. At every Apothecary's shop a Surgeon is appointed with a sufficient salary, to attend daily two hours forenoon and afternoon, and if the patients are not able to pay for the medicines, they are placed to the Empress's account. The Apothecaries receive all their drugs from the Chancery, and are in fact employed by government; there are indeed some few private Apothecaries, but these are as much subject to the rules of the Chancery as the others.

It is a regulation established in Russia, that every Surgeon, whether in the service or not, shall in difficult cases call for the advice of a Physician or senior Surgeon; nor is any Surgeon allowed to perform an operation on a patient without having previously had the advice and concurrence of such, if possible to be procured. If this regulation is neglected, and the patient dies, or has reason to complain of his treatment, the Surgeon is punished. When there is difficulty or danger, even Physicians are obliged to apply for the advice of others.

President of the Chancery. M. de Rshewsky.

Physicians to her Imperial Majesty, all of whom rank as Counsellors of State.

John Rogerson, M. D. F. R. S. Dr. Scilling. Dr. Krufe.

Principal Surgeon. Mr. Roellein, Counsellor of State.

Hospitals.

There are two large hospitals at St. Petersburg, both erected by Peter the Great. One is for the army, and the other for the navy. They are contiguous to each other, and form three sides of a very large square. In the middle of the side facing the Neva is a handsome church for the use of both hospitals. The building is two stories high, and covered galleries go quite round it. Each hospital has an anatomical theatre, large enough to contain three hundred persons, and a dissecting-room adjoining to it. Each hospital is attended by several Physicians, a principal Surgeon, five Surgeons in ordinary, ten Surgeons-mates, and twenty students. There are likewise professors of physic, surgery, and anatomy, belonging to each hospital, and a professor of botany who instructs the students of both.

The medical service in these and in every other hospital in the Russian empire, is conducted in the following manner: Every morning at six o'clock a bell is rung to warn the Physicians and Surgeons to get ready; at seven it rings again to summon them to repair immediately to the ward where the patients requiring surgical treatment are kept. From this the Surgeons proceed with the Physicians through all the remaining wards. The Surgeons-mates write down in a day-book what the Physicians prescribe for each patient, and after all the patients have been visited, go with the students to the Apothecary's shop, where they attend till the medicines are prepared, carry them to the respective wards, and exhibit them as was directed. One of the Surgeons in ordinary is obliged to be constantly in the hospital; the rest of the Surgeons may attend their private patients, but must return at seven o'clock in the evening; but the mates, not being suffered to practise, and the students, can go no where from the hospital without leave from the principal Surgeon.

Reports of the number of sick entered, cured, dead, and remaining, with the names of the different diseases, are sent to the Medicine Chancery every week. If a complaint is made either of the Physicians, Surgeons, or Surgeons-mates, for non-attendance a single-day, a month's pay is deducted from their salary; and on those who bear no rank, corporal punishment is inflicted. If any of the attendants give any other medicines, meats or drink to a patient, than what are ordered by the Physicians or Surgeons, they undergo a severe whipping.

The IMPERIAL ACADEMY OF SCIENCES, was instituted by Peter the Great, who erected a magnificent building for this purpose. This edifice was burnt down in 1746, but most of the books and curiosities it contained were saved, and it was soon afterwards rebuilt. Ruysch's collection is in one of the galleries. A catalogue of the museum belonging to the academy was published in 1741 in two vols. 8vo.

This academy has Professorships liberally endowed by the founder, for teaching the different sciences. Their transactions are published annually in 4to. under the title of Novi Commentarii Academiæ Imperialis Petropolitanae.

Directress. Princess of Daschaw.

The ROYAL COLLEGE OF PHYSICIANS. This institution may be considered as a court established by government for the regulation of the practice of physic in the Danish dominions. It is consulted by the government on all matters relative to physic, and it takes cognizance of all abuses committed by medical practitioners.

No person is allowed to practice physic or surgery without having gone through a regular course of study, and submitting to a public examination in physic, surgery, and midwifery. Apothecaries and midwives are likewise examined by the college before they can obtain a licence. No patents are granted for the distribution of Empirical medicines, which are prohibited under severe penalties.

There is a public institution in Copenhagen, (somewhat similar to the dispensaries in London) for attending the poor at their own houses, and furnishing them with medicines. The government defrays the whole of the expence, and likewise employs three physicians, three surgeons, and several assistants in the business of the institution. In every district in Denmark a physician and surgeon are appointed and paid by the King to give assistance to the poor, and to take care that the regulations of the college of physicians are duly observed. They likewise give reports to the college when any epidemic disease makes its appearance in their district.

The UNIVERSITY of UPSAL was established in 1249, by K. Eric XI. At that time it consisted of four Professors, (IV Canonici Seculares) who were by no means eager to promote the cause of science, so that they soon sunk into a state of idleness, and nothing remarkable was done at Upsal, till the time of the Protector Sten-Sture the Elder, who in 1476, with the assistance of Jacob Ulston, at that time archbishop of Upsal, Upsal, obtained from Pope Sixtus IV. a constitution for the university, which was publicly consecrated with great solemnity on the 21st of September the same year, and the professors began their public lectures on the 7th of October following.

The university business at present is managed by the consistory, in which every professor has a seat. The rector, who presides in it, is elected every half year from among the professors. No student, or any other person belonging to the university can be arrested by any other authority than that of the consistory, and this court can punish with death.

A University was founded at this place in 1669. The present professors are as follow :

Theory and Practice of Physic. Dr. Kannegciser.
Chemistry. Dr. Rerflens.
Botany. G. H. Weber, M. D.
Midwifery. Dr. Berger.
Natural History. J. C. Fabricius, M. D.

LIEGE.

The COLLEGE of PHYSICIANS. Instituted in 1699, by Joseph Clement of Bavaria, Elector of Cologne and Prince Bishop of Liege. It consists of a President, who is always some person of rank, eight Assessors, the eldest of whom has the title of Provost, and thirty-one members. Physicians who have graduated in any university are admitted without submitting to any examination, on producing their diploma.—The Pharmacopeia of this college was published in 1740.

President. Baron de Haxhe.
Provost. Dr. de Moreal.

The SURGEONS of Liege are incorporated. Their number at present is about thirty. Previous to their admission they are required to submit to an examination by the Assessors of the college, and the Surgeons of the town, who are convened for that purpose.

The APOTHECARIES are obliged to serve an apprenticeship of five years, and to undergo an examination by the Assessors of the college before they are allowed to follow their profession. There are at present about twenty-eight Apothecaries shops at Liege.

The HAGUE.

Physicians to the Stadtholder. Walter Van Doeveren, M. D.

Surgeons.

Mr. Schenk, Mr. Schoonderhaagen.

There are two medical professorships at the Hague, one for anatomy, midwifery, and surgery; and the other for botany. There are similar institutions in almost every large town in the United Provinces. The professors lecture in Dutch.

Professor of Anatomy, &c. Dr. Huibertz.
Botany. Dr. Swenke.

There is no hospital at this place. The sick poor are visited at their own houses by four Physicians and four Surgeons, who are paid by the Magistrates, and have each their respective districts.

MEDICAL SOCIETY at the HAGUE for collecting Meteorological Observations and the History of Epidemics.

President. M. Vanderhaa.

Secretary. Mr. Vandembosc.

LEYDEN.

The University at this place was founded in 1575, and has long been deservedly celebrated as one of the most excellent schools of physic in Europe. Dr. Goodall in his "College of Physicians vindicated," has described the method of taking a degree in physic in this University; we shall copy what he says on the subject as the same mode is still in use.

"Whenever any Student hath spent a competent time in the University, or any "foreigner comes over to take his degree, he first makes his application to the "Dean of the Medical Faculty, who examines him one hour (in Latin) in the "theory and practice of Physic; and if he finds him not well accomplished in "either, he interdicts him making any further progress in order to the taking of a "degree, till he be better fitted for so great an undertaking; but if he gives a full "and satisfactory account of his proficiency in both, he is sent to visit the rest of "the professors of that faculty, who appointing a convenient time, do all meet "together and examine him two hours; and if he be then approved, they give "him

“ him two aphorisms of Hippocrates to discourse of next day a quarter of an hour ;
 “ and then they oppose his explication for three quarters of an hour. After this “ he is to make and print a thesis upon what subject he pleaseth, which he sends to “ all the professors of the university who meet him at an appointed hour, and are “ judges of his abilities in the defence of his Thesis against the professors of physic,
 “ who each man in his place acts the part of an opponent till an hour be spent ;
 “ then is he admitted by the Dean of the Faculty, having obtained the approbation
 “ of the Rector Magnificus and the rest of the Professors, to the degree of Doctor,
 “ and receiveth their diploma as a testimonial of his due performance of all the afore“ mentioned exercises.

“ This in short is the manner of taking degrees privately, but if more publicly,
 “ then the person that takes his degree is opposed by non-graduates in that faculty,
 “ and the professors of physic with the rest of the professors sit by as judges.”

Besides the two modes of graduation (public and private) mentioned by Dr. Goodall, there is a third, ex more majorum, as it is called, which is practised only rarely, on particular occasions, when the university is assembled in the great church. There was a meeting of this sort in 1774 at the time of the jubilee, at which the stadtholder, the foreign ministers, nobility, &c. assisted. On that occasion degrees were conferred in the several faculties ex more majorum.

The library, which is open twice a week for the use of the students, contains a great number of books and MSS. and amongst others the famous manuscript of Rhazes on the Small-pox, which was formerly borrowed by Dr. Mead, and since by Mr. Channing. The university have lately purchased the library of Wepfer, who is well known to the medical world by his Historia Apoplecticorum.

The botanic garden here has long been famous. Boerhaave, Adrian Van Royen, and the present professor, have all contributed to enrich and improve it. The plants are arranged according to Van Royen's system.

The medical Professors begin their lectures in September, and continue them till the end of June.

GRONINGEN,

This University was founded in 1614. The Medical Professors are,

Theory and Pract. of Physic, and Chemistry.	Paul Graeven, M. D.
Anatomy and Surgery.	Wymold Muniks, M. D.
Anatomy, Chemistry, and Botany.	Peter Camper, M. D. F. R. S. (resides on his estate at Lancune, near Franeker).

UTRECHT.

This University, which dates from 1636, seems to be the next in reputation to that of Leyden. The Medical Professors are,

Theory and Practice of Physic.	John Oosterdyk Schacht, M. D.
Anatomy and Surgery.	Peter Luchtmans, M. D.
Botany, Physiology, and Chemistry.	Alexis Peter Nahuys, M. D.

HARDERWYCK.

The University at this place was re-established in 1600, and has two Professors of Physic.

Anatomy, Surgery, and Theory of Physic.	Rodolphus Forster, M. D.
Chemistry, Botany, and Midwifery.	Mathias Van Geuns, M. D.

AMSTERDAM.

There is an excellent Botanic Garden at this place, and a good theatre with an endowment for anatomical and chirurgical lectures. It was in this theatre that the famous Ruysch used formerly to deliver his lectures.

Professors of Botany.	John Burmann, M. D.
	Nicholas Lawrence Burmann, M. D. (son of the other Professor).
Professor of Anatomy and Surgery.	Andrew Bonn, M. D.

The GAST-HUYS, or HOSPITAL. This building consists of four large wards, paved with marble, and kept extremely clean. Two of these wards are for men, and the other two for women. There are generally about five hundred patients in the house. The physicians and surgeons visit it twice a day.

Physicians.	Dr. Burmann, jun.
	Dr. Oosterdyck.
Surgeons.	Mr. Labee, Mr. David Van Gesscher.

The CHIRURGICAL SOCIETY, instituted at Amsterdam several years ago, consists of the most eminent Physicians and Surgeons of that city. They give a gold medal to the best writer on a surgical question that is proposed annually.

At HAERLEM, ROTTERDAM, and FLUSHING, societies have been instituted for the improvement of science. The two former have published several volumes of their transactions in Dutch.

G H E N T .

The COLLEGE of PHYSICIANS. Instituted by Letters Patent in 1684, consists of two Directors, a Secretary, four other officers who are called Assessors, and twenty-four Licentiates.

There are in Ghent about thirty-five Surgeons, who are likewise incorporated; twenty-two Apothecaries; and six Druggists.

L O U V A I N E .

The University at this place, founded in 1426, is the only one in the Low Countries. The number of Students exceeds five thousand, only a small part of whom, (not more than three hundred) are in the physic line. The degrees granted here are those of Licentiate or Bachelor of Physic, and Doctor. No person can practise in the Austrian Netherlands without being a Licentiate of this university, but the number of Doctors is very limited, seldom exceeding three or four, who compose what is called the Facultas Stricta. These gentlemen pay a very considerable sum (upwards of 300*l.*) on their admission, and as it is they who examine candidates for a licence, from each of whom they receive considerable fees, they are very cautious how they increase their number.

There is a small hospital here, but none of the Students are permitted to attend it till they have been three years at the University.

The Faculty of Physic.

The University of Paris, according to M. Goulin, dates its institution from the year 1180. It consists at present of the four faculties of Divinity, Civil Law, Physic and the Arts, each of which forms a distinct corps. In order to practise physic at Paris, it is requisite either to be a Member of the Faculty, or Physician to the Royal Family, or some of the Princes of the Blood. The Members of the Faculty are stiled Doctors Regent; one of them is chosen every year to the office of Doyen, or President, and five others are annually elected to deliver lectures in Latin on Pathology, Physiology, Chemistry, Materia Medica, and Surgery. These lectures begin the first week in October. The schools belonging to the Faculty are at present in the rue Saint Jean de Beauvois. Six Members of the Faculty meet there every Monday morning at ten o'clock, to prescribe gratis to poor people for two hours. The Faculty's library is open every Thursday in the afternoon,

THE COLLEGE OF SURGEONS. In France, as in other parts of Europe, the Surgeons were formerly united with the Barber-Surgeons. The celebrated Ambrose Paré, in the second Edition of his Traité des plaies d'arquebuse, printed at Paris in 1551, styles himself Barber-Surgeon (Barbier-Chirurgien). In 1731, the two professions were separated, and the Academy of Surgery was founded the year following, by Louis XV. The honour of this institution is chiefly due to the late Messieurs Mareschal & la Peyronie. The latter bequeathed to this college, and to that at Montpellier, almost the whole of his estate, which was considerable. A very elegant building has lately been erected for the use of this Company, at a little distance from the old schools of Surgery. In this building are apartments for the use of the Academy of Surgery; a Laboratory; a small Infirmary containing six beds for patients labouring under any singular disease requiring Surgical treatment; an Amphitheatre for lectures, capable of accommodating a thousand students; a library, &c.

In order to be admitted of this College it is necessary to have served five years with one of the Members, to have taken the degree of M. A. in some French University; to undergo a number of examinations in Latin, and, lastly, to defend a Thesis in the public schools. The first Thesis defended in Latin upon such an occasion, was in 1749, by M. Louis the present Secretary to the Academy.

Besides the Surgeons of Paris, there are a certain number of persons licensed by this College, under the title of Experts, as Oculists, or Dentists, or Curers of Hernias. These persons must have served at least two years under a Master Surgeon, and must submit to be examined before they can be admitted to practice. They are liable to a penalty of 300 livres, if they assume the title of Surgeon, or practise in any other branch of the art than that for which they are licensed. They are only to stile themselves Experts Oculistes, Dentistes, ou Herniaires.

The number of Master Surgeons belonging to this College, (all of whom, as we observed, are Ordinary Members of the Academy) is at present 188.

The following Professors, Members of the College, are paid by the King, and their Lectures may be attended by students without any expence.

Professors of Physiology.	M. Louis, M. Chopart.
Pathology.	M. Fabre, M. Tenon.
Therapeutics.	M. Brafdor, M. Hevin.
Midwifery (for the instruction of Midwives)	M. Deleurye.
Midwifery (for students in Sur- gery)	M. Barbaut.
Chirurgical Chemistry.	M. Peyrilhe.
Anatomy.	M. Sabatier, M. Joseph Sue.
of the Opera- tions.	M. Ferrand, M. Laffus.
Diseases of the eye.	M. Becquet.

APOTHECARIES. The Apothecaries of Paris are incorporated. They have a good botanic garden, in which is a handsome building for the meetings, &c. of the Company, and for preparing several articles of the Paris Pharmacopeia; particularly the Theriaca, which is done every year with much ceremony in the presence of the Magistrates and of the Faculty of Physic. Formerly they used to give courses of chemistry in this garden, but these have long been discontinued. This company consists at present of 153 members. There are likewise in Paris other Apothecaries who are entitled to the privilege of dispensing medicines, by their belonging to the court, or having some other public appointment.

LE JARDIN DU ROI, or the King's Garden. Founded in 1626, for the improvement of Botany. Schools of Anatomy and Chemistry have since been added, and all of these branches are taught publicly at the King's expence. The King's Museum, situated at the entrance into the Garden, is open to the public every Monday and Thursday in the Afternoon.

Superintendant of the Garden,	The Count de Buffon.
Professor of Botany,	Dr. le Monnier.
Demonstrator,	Dr. de Jussieu.
Professor of Chemistry,	Dr. Macquer.
                    Anatomy,	Dr. Petit.
Demonstrator,	M. Mertrud.
Keeper and Demonstrator of the
          Museum of Natural History,	Dr. d'Aubenton.
His Deputy,	M. J. Daubenton.

The HOTEL DIEU. This Hospital usually contains about 3000 patients. The Beds are disposed in several rows in each ward, and it is not unusual to see six patients in one bed. From pretty accurate calculations it appears, that about one in five die of all who are admitted.

Consulting Physician,	Dr. Cochu.
Physicians in Ordinary,	Dr. Dejean, Dr. Majault, Dr. Rouffin de Montabourg,
	Dr. Danié Despatureaux, Dr. Solier de la Romillais,
	Dr. Mallet, Dr. Duhaume, Dr. Philip.
Principal Surgeon,	M. Moreau.

HOSPITAL for INCURABLES, is open for the reception of patients labouring under any disease, except Scrophula, Epilepsy, and the Lues Venerea.

Physician,	Dr. Cochu, of the Faculty of Physic.
Surgeon,	M. Ami.

HOPITAL DES PETITES MAISONS, admits 400 aged persons, and likewise lunatic and venereal patients.

Surgeon, M. Maret.

HOPITAL DES QUINZE VINGTS. This institution, which is as ancient as the reign of St. Louis, serves as an asylum to three hundred blind persons, who are here accommodated with lodging and a small stipend towards their support. Certain churches are allotted to them, in which no others besides themselves are allowed to ask alms.

Surgeon, Mr. Pujgot.

The CHARITY HOSPITAL, established in 1602. The patients are disposed in separate beds, but the bedsteads are of wood, and the wards, though clean, are neither so airy nor so well ventilated, as those of our large hospitals in London.

Physicians,	Dr. Maloet,
	Dr. Thierry de Buffy,
	Dr. Dumangin.
Principal Surgeon,	M. Default.

The ROYAL ACADEMY OF SCIENCES, founded in 1666*, is composed of five classes of academicians, viz. twelve Honorary members, twenty Pensioned Members, (Pensionnaires) thirty-two Fellows, (Affociés) and thirteen Candidates, (Ad-joints). Of the thirty-two Fellows eight are foreigners, twelve are engaged to no particular science, and are therefore called Affociés libres, the twelve others, as well as the Pensionnaires and the Ad-joints must reside at Paris. The meetings are held at the Louvre every Wednesday and Saturday afternoon.

BUREAU DU JOURNAL DES SAVANS, established in 1665. The meetings are held once a fortnight at the Keeper's of the Seal.

Honorary Members.

Abbé Barthelemi, Keeper of the King's Medals.
M. de Brequigny, of the French Academy.
Dr. Daubenton, of the Academy of Sciences.
M. Bailly, of the Academy of Sciences.
Dr. Barthés, First Physician to the Duke of Orleans.

Authors.

M. de Guignes, of the Academy of Belles Lettres.

LYONS.

The Royal College of Physicians.

Instituted in 1577. In order to be admitted a member of this College, the candidate must have taken the degree of M. D. in some reputable university, and have practised at least four years in a city or walled town. He must likewise undergo two public examinations, one on the theory, and the other on the practice of physic, in the presence of the Lieutenant-Governor, the Attorney-General, and the Magistrates of the city. The subjects for these examinations are drawn by lot, by the Lieutenant-Governor, a number of written papers being put into a bag for that purpose, and the candidate is obliged immediately to discourse on them in Latin, after which he is interrogated by the members of the College, and is admitted or rejected by the majority of votes.

Some of the members are elected annually to give lectures in the Town-house on chemistry, botany, anatomy, and surgery. The eldest member, resident at Lyons, has the title of Doyen or President.

The ROYAL COLLEGE OF SURGEONS, instituted in 1577. By letters patent dated in 1775, it has been placed nearly on the same footing as the College of Surgery at Paris. The number of members at present amounts to 93.

MONTPELIER.

The University at this place was founded in 1220. The number of students here at present is considerable. The Professors lecture chiefly in French, and the public disputations are carried on sometimes in that language and sometimes in Latin. The library, which is open once a week, was founded by the late M. Haguenot.

Chancellor,	Paul Joseph Barthez, M. D. (resides at Paris).
Professors of Physic,	Francis de la Mure, M. D.
_____	Gaspard John René, M. D.
_____	Anthony Gouan, M. D.
_____	Francis Broussonet, M. D.
_____	M. Vigaroux, M. D.
_____	_____ Brun, M. D.
Demonstrator of Anatomy,	M. Goulard, sen.

The COLLEGE OF SURGEONS, instituted in 1741. The late M. de la Peyronie bequeathed 100,000 livres and two houses at Montpellier for this purpose. There are at present about forty members. In the schools belonging to the College, Anatomy, Surgery, and Midwifery, are taught by the following Professors:

Professor of Anatomy,	M. Bourguenod.
_____ of the Principles of Surgery,	M. Sarrau, M. Espinas.
_____ the Operations _____	M. Vigaroux, M. Poutingon.
_____ the Diseases of the Bones,	M. Galabert, M. Serda.
_____ Midwifery,	M. Serres, M. Laborie.

STRASBURGH.

The UNIVERSITY of STRASBURGH, founded in 1538, consists of four faculties. The Professors are all of the Lutheran persuasion. The faculty of Physic consists, at present, of forty-eight members, of whom the following are Professors.

*Practice of Physic,
Chemistry, Botany, and the Materia
Medica,*

John Herrmann, M. D.

James Reinbold Spielmann, M. D. of the Imperial Academy of Nat. Cur. of the Academies of St. Petersburg, Berlin, &c. and Canon (Chanoine) of the chapter of St. Thomas.

Anatomy and Surgery,

John Fred. Lobstein, M. D. Canon of the chapter of St. Thomas.

*Natural Philosophy,
Professor extraordinary of Physic,*

George Adolphus Franck, M. D.

John Louis Schurer, M. D.

John Fred. Ehrmann, M. D.

SURGEONS. The Surgeons of Straßburgh have long been formed into a company; their statutes and privileges were confirmed by Louis XIV. Their number at present is about 30.

APOTHECARIES. By a very old law, which is very strictly observed, the number of Apothecaries shops in Straßburgh is never to exceed six. Each of these shops is private property, and when the proprietor is unwilling or incapable of carrying on the business of an Apothecary himself, he may appoint one to act in his name, under the title of Administrator. This Administrator however must be approved of by the Faculty of Physic. Two of the six shops are at present managed by Administrators. One of the two is the property of Professor Spielmann, to whom it has devolved by inheritance; his Administrator is Mr. Leipold; the other belongs to a minor, and is managed by Mr. Haguenau.

LORRAINE.

The ROYAL COLLEGE of PHYSICIANS. The ROYAL COLLEGE of SURGEONS established at Nancy in 1770, nearly on the same plan as the Royal Academy of Surgery at Paris, consists of Ordinary, Honorary, and Corresponding Members.

The APOTHECARIES at NANCY are incorporated. Their number is limited to eight.

I T A L Y.

There are Colleges of Physicians in Rome, Turin, and some other cities in Italy, but in small towns and villages, the Physicians are paid by a tax on the inhabitants at the rate of about two shillings for each. These appointments are called Condottas. If a village is too small to support a Physician, two or three others are joined with it, to form a Condotta; and their common Physician is enabled to keep a horse, a mule, or a carriage. If on the other hand the place is too large for one Physician, the corporation has more than one salary to appoint, and more than one Condotta to dispose of. The smallest Condottas bring in about thirty, and the largest seventy or eighty pounds a year, and almost all the families of a Condotta, whether they have occasion for their Physician or not, send him some little present at Christmas and Easter. Surgeons are appointed to Condottas in the same manner as Physicians. As for Apothecaries, there are none but in great cities, and even in them, their number is small. They are not allowed to prescribe, but any body that chuses it may set up for one after undergoing the usual examinations.

MADRID.

The Physicians of Madrid are not incorporated. The practice of phyfic in that city and throughout Spain is regulated by a court, intituted for that purpofe, called the Protomedicato. This Tribunal confifts of the King's firft Physician and fome others. No Physician is allowed to praftife till he has been examined and approved of by the Protomedicato.

The only Medical Lectures given at Madrid are, a few on anatomy and botany, that are occasionally delivered at the Hospital and Botanic Garden.

Of the twenty-two Spanifh Universities, the principal ones are thofe of Salamanca, Valadolid and Alcala, in each of which are three medical professors.

There is no College of Surgeons, or fchool of Surgery at Madrid, but a perfon, in order to be admitted to praftife, muft have attended an hofpital, or ferved under a mafter Surgeon four years, and be approved of by the Protomedicato.

* * As the Contraction of Names, from the varying Practice of Writers, appears to be arbitrary; and as Brevity must ever be consulted in an Index; it is necessary to explain the Method that has been adopted in the following. The under-written Letters, when they stand singly, or are the first of a numerous Set of Initials, signify the Words annexed to them. But in the second, or third Place, &c. though the Letters may bear an undetermined Meaning; it is presumed not to be of any Moment; as the Reader is supposed previously to know the nominal Description of the Person for whose Place of Residence he enquires, and similar Christian Names will not often occur with the same Surnames.
